The warm and heavy rain of Sunday and Sunday night melted considerable snow from the lower hills and raised the river to quite a respectable notch, higher than it had been thus far this season. Old residents who saw the flood of '90, however, view it with contempt. In that historic year the water ran within five or six feet of the bridge and the river had an almost uniform grade from the White Rocks along the entire town frontage, the rapids below the dam being altogether invisible and the dam itself being nil. There have been four "big waters" since the country was settled by white people over 50 years ago; one in 1852, one in 1862, one in 1881 and the last in 1890.

An unsuccessful attempt was made to burglarize J. E. Kerley's grocery store on Friday night. The would-be burglar attempted to enter the building by the back door which was secured by a bolt and also by the thumb catch of the lock. The thief whittled a hole in one of door panels with a pocket knife, large enough to admit his hand. He was then able to reach inside and slip the bolt but could not reach the catch and so was unable to open the door. Mr. Kerley feels certain that he knows the identity of the offender and thinks it remarkably poor judgment on his part to take so many chances for a few dollars worth of groceries.

Richards & Pringle's Georgia minstrels arrived here Sunday and gave their entertainment on Monday evening. They are a mammoth minstrel troupe, requiring two cars to transport themselves and their paraphernalia. They give a lively performance and keep things going. The curtain does not drop from the beginning to the end of the performance. The Alabama quartette sang in a very pleasing manner and delighted the audience with their plantation songs. The "Black Watch" drill and maneuver was a novelty and remarkably interesting and well executed. The slack wire and roller skating acts were very good as was also the musical act of the Houseley brothers. Altogether it was one of the best minstrel performances which have been given in our city.
