Explosion of Soda.

The assembled crowd at Fred Roper's soda fountain and billiard hall were treated to an unusual and startling experience on Sunday. The soda tank sitting near the back door of the building suddenly blew up like a 13 inch shell, with a tremendous report, while fragments flew to the four winds. One heavy piece smashed through the lath and plaster of the ceiling, inflicting a ragged and gaping wound. Another fragment flew out into the front room, creating consternation among the young men present. Another piece cracked a small window in one corner of the room and smaller fragments flew everywhere. Several fair breadth capers are reported and it seems a marvel that some one was not severely injured.

Better Than a Circus.

The following letter was written to an Indiana paper by Mark Pardoe, a Jackson county stockman and it was printed in all sobriety by that journal. It is little wonder that eastern people often arrive here bristling as it were with bayonets and imagine that they are landing in a howling wilderness:

Last week I was engaged by the stockmen to exterminate the animals in a certain section. I secured the aid of about a hundred Klamath Indians from near Lake Klamath, and early Saturday morning with Indians and a score of cowboys surrounded the district five miles square in the foothills of the Pit range and gradually closed toward the center, 200 dogs in the rodeo. As we reached the center of the circle, cats-mountain, black bears, coyotes and an occasional grizzly bear tried to break through the line, but was met with a shower of bullets. Dozens of animals perished in the attempt to escape, but 200 others were finally cornered in a box canyon, where redskins and cow-punchers picked them off from the rocks above.

There were scores of close conflicts with the enraged and frightened animals and in one melee four Indians were frightfully mangled by a grizzly before their shots finally finished the bear.

One of the reds, Klakashi, a former chief of the tribe, received fatal wounds from the claws of the big fellow. One dog closed in on the victim, and dozens of them were killed before the slaughter was complete.

The final count showed 19 dead mountain lions, five grizzlies, two lynx and over 100 coyotes, doubtless the biggest round-up of wild animals that ever occurred in Oregon.
