SAY BURIED GOLD IS TAKEN

Hanover (N. J.) Townsfolk Brotte Over a Rich Discovery Near Village.

Buried treasure, recovered after be ing hidden in the earth for more than a century has excited the townsfolk of Hanover, a small village about three miles from Morristown, N. J. An iron pot, rusty and falling apart from age, was found at the bottom of an open hole six feet deep on the land of the Walker homestead, imbedded in four walls of stout masonry.

The opening in the ground had been made at midnight the night before by three strangers, who were seen at work by Harvey Edwards, a farmer, and their actions were so mysterious that he, instead of investigating, retreated into his own house, locked and barred all the windows save one in the attic from which he watched the silent figures digging furiously until almost daylight. The nearest constable lived le away. Edwards had no weapon in the house but an old shotgun, and he did not dare to venture out until the men packed their tools into bags and walked rapidly up the road leading from the village. The next after-noon a dezen residents in the neighborhood went to look at the excavatious and the old iron pot, and the opinion was unanimous that the strangers had by some means come into the possession of the secret of the hid-ing place of $50,000 in gold which disappeared in the revolutionary war after it had been deposited with Aaron Kitchell, a patriot and one of the first mem bers of the continental congress from

It seems incredible, yet it is a fact that its Germany a few days ago a balloon traveled 100 miles in 75 minutes. The balloon left Strasburg at 11 a. m. and arrived at Bibersch at 12:15 p. m. being stopped there by the branch of a linden tree, which held it fast. When it was examined a note was found saying that it had left Strasburg at 11 a. m. of that day, and that any information as to its subsequent movements would be greatfully received by the Strasburg displacements. They are known by various names, but are all due to the same cause, acid and other poisons in the blood that irritate and interfere with the proper action of the skin.

The news of its safe arival at Riberach, 100 miles distant rom Strasburg, was at once sent to hem; and on the following day Prof. Dr. Hergesell arrived from Strusburg and took charge of the balloon.

According to him, the first intention of himself and his colleagues was to send out a regular balloon with one or we passengers, but on account of the torm they were unable to do so. They d to send out a large infloor fitted with a barumeter and other in truments, her the storm prevented it from making any headway, and so finally they equipped a small balloon with instruments and sent it forth.
