Mrs. A. R. Ross and J. W. Hare, brother and sister of G. W. Hare, Misses Grace Kirkland and Lydia Scott, J. M. Hare, G. M. Booker and Jas. Leary, all of Rushville, Ill. arrived here Wednesday to visit with the family of G. W. Hare and to spend some time in southern Oregon.

W. M. Hair received a letter from a brother in Nebraska, saying that the thermometer had gone to 118 in the shade during the recent hot wave, the hottest weather in the experience of old residents. We should experience a feeling of coolness by comparison.

Some of our small boys seem to be getting altogether too reckless in their use of other people's property. A few days ago, one boy deliberately appropriated a lady's bicycle leaning against a fence in full view of the residence, rode it away and kept it for several hours. Whether or not he would ever have brought it back of his own volition is not known, but he was detected by another small boy and made to relinquish the wheel. For his sake and that of other reckless youth, some severe measures in regard to such things seem to be a growing necessity.

W. of W. Excursion.

Fire at Medford.
 Medford had a $500 fire Wednesday night of last week. The large warehouse belonging to J. A. Perry took fire about one o'clock and was completely destroyed, with about 14,000 bushels of wheat. While it is possible that the fire might have started by sparks from the engine of the 12 o'clock train, it is thought most probable that it was the work of an incendiary. The building is said to have been a rendezvous for hobos.
