
. THE FOUNT OF YOUTH.

The fount of youth has oft been sought Since days of long ago. And oft in fancy men have seen its living waters flow. Through desert, swamp and wilderness The search has been pursued, in hope that by the magic fount Youth's charms might be renewed.

But men have turned from that vain quest, Their hopes forever crushed; For though they searched through all the vorid

No magic fountain gushed. And men resigned themselves to age That robbed them of their grace. That sapped their strength and thickly spread Time's wrinkles on the face.

in inter years men's thoughts have turned To plans for longer life, And in clizies they have sought New Strength ford daily strife, And oft 'tis heraided abroad That scientist or sage Has finally evolved a plan Has finally evolved a plan To stay the blight of age.

But men grow old, and women, too, As in the days of yors, For no elixits they have tried Their youthful charms restore, And as they can't deceive themselves Some seek to hide the truth, And dys and blact their hair and paint On sheeks the hues of youth.

The fount of youth is in each heart. The found of youth is in each neart, And those who keep if pure Will longer hold the charms of youth And length of life mears. And when at last that fountain fails, And old age on them steals. They'll bear it well because no man Is older than he feels. --Piltsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

Brooks No. 3013 By Jessie Llewellyn. pyright, 180, by Authors Syndicate.

COR eight years I had occupied the position of resident physician at the state penitentiary at 8-, and for the first time my position meant much to me. This was owing to a romance which had begun to blossom for me within the nusters prison walls. She was the warden's nicce, beautiful and frail, who had but recently taken up her abude among us, acting as secre-tary to her uncle. The interest was mutual, for Pauline did not frown upon my suit, and I was on my way to the warden to ask his sanction of our union when I met him in the corridor erumpling a telegram in his hand. Per-emptorily detaining me, he explained that he was leaving the city immediate ly on urgent business, and that as the deputy was ill I would be compelled to act in his place.

Accordingly I started on my rounds of inspection at once with no word of the subject nearest my heart. I went first to the brush shop, where a new man was oversceing the work, and was detained there some time by the ap-parent unrest and disorder. Thoughts of this place had, at the warden's first lustructions, caused me misgivings which grew to positive spprehensions when Brown, the new man called me aside and reported a convict by the name of Brooks for rank insubordination. This Brooks was a life man and a particularly bad one. He had given us no end of trouble during the ten months he had been in. He was a mulatto and seemed to have all the had blood of both races in his veins. All my quaims were confirmed that evening when, just as Pauline and 1 were leaving the building for a quiet stroll about the campus, a "irusty" in-formed me of Brooks' escape. He had removed one of the great flags in the floor of the solitary and had slipped underneath.

Pauline was pale and trembling when I left her to begin the search for this black monster. Fearing he would fire the building before we could discoverhim, I hastily summoned to my aid two faithful trustles whom we had dubbed "Hanks" and "Blondie."

I decided to go under the floor by a trap door in the farthest end of the west wing and to search every foot of as far as the new cellhouse;

Hanks carried a lantern on my right and Blondle carried one on my while I covered the rough middle ground between. It was not an easy place to search, for the great steam mains, which ran from engine-room to kitchens and radiators, were everywhere overhead. Then there were two cross walls through which holes had been drilled barely large enough to pass a man.

At last we reached the thick wall which separates the new from the old This wall was nearly two feet thick, but had the usual opening into the new cellhouse.
