Jennings Mineral Magnet.

The fact that there have been a great many so-called mineral magnets, or rods, that have proved to be fakes, has caused a large number of people to look upon all effort in that direction with distrust, doubt, or an impossibility. But we should remember that this is an age of inventions, and improvements. Electricity is the most wonderful discovery that has ever been made by man and is used in more ways than anything else under the sun and is now only in its infancy. If science knew nothing about electricity before Franklin's day, is it not reasonable to assert that it does not know of all the uses it can be put to now?

Scientists have always held that gold and silver had no attraction, but we positively assert that they have, and we are in a position to prove it. Every metal known to the world has its affinity, and we claim to have found the affinity. The proper material to attract gold and copper, with the aid of electricity, which we are prepared to demonstrate.

We claim that these emanates, or exhalations from every metal some subtle substance or particles that are conductors of electricity of which we are prepared to give the philosophy, but the limits of a newspaper article forbid. The earth, that is, rocks and dirt, water and air are conductors of electricity.

As one of the great principles of this instrument is electricity in a mild form, the human body being the dynamo, it requires a certain amount of personal, or bodily electricity or magnetism, in the operator to work it successfully. Ten pounds of gold, silver, or copper may be placed within one foot of the instrument, with the magnet suspended in the air by a cord, the magnet will not be attracted by the metal, but let the writer or any one who possesses an average amount of electricity, place his or her hands on the magnet and a current is at once established between the instrument and the metal, and the magnet is attracted by the metal. The writer will guarantee that he may be blindfolded and led with the magnet in his hands over a gold bearing quartz ledge, and he will tell when he comes to the ledge, and will give the true width of the ledge.

The instrument is used for tracing and locating quartz ledges giving their width and pay shoot. For locating pockets and for tracing and giving the boundaries of old gold bearing channel beds. If this article should stimulate those interested in mining to thought and investigation, and thereby promote the mining interest and development of the rich latent mineral resources of Josephine county and Southern Oregon, the writer will feel amply compensated for this feeble effort.

Hold-Up Planned

A sensational report of what appears to be a premeditated plan to hold up passenger train, No. 16, Tuesday morning, in the Sacramento canyon, north of Redding, has reached Ashland, says the Tidings. It seems that when the train arrived at Middle Creek, a hamlet five miles north of Redding, the forward brakeman discovered in the semi-darkness three roughly clad strangers on the blind baggage, between the day coach and baggage car. He ordered them to get off the train, but one of them pulled a sawed-off shotgun, and defied the brakeman to put him and his companions off, who immediately scented a hold-up and at once made his way into the chair car for the purpose of rousing and warning the sleeping passengers. In the mean time the train had reached Keswick and when the brakeman returned to the forward end of the car the lawless looking tourists had disappeared.

The Grand Benefit Concert which was announced in last week's Observer for Monday the 27th, is postponed until it can be given on Wednesday the 29th.

Mining Lamps.

J. Wolke, the hardware merchant, has a number of mining lamps of a style which is probably destined to come into far more general use than they have hitherto been given. In hydraulic mines, night work is nearly always handicapped by insufficient light. It is a difficult matter to secure a light that will illuminate a sufficient area of outdoor territory for the work to progress to the best advantage. The old fashioned way of lighting placer mines was by torch light with large fires of resinous pine. This style of light was later superseded by kerosene. The gasoline light is very bright and penetrating and aided by the powerful reflectors will cast a very clear light for a long distance. It is probably the best lamp for placer mining which has yet been produced.

Cabinets and Cabinet-Making.
The gradual reconstruction of Mr. Roosevelt's Cabinet leads a direct and timely interest to an article which the Hon. Charles Emory Smith has just written for The Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia.

Cabinets and Cabinet-Making tells how Presidents choose their official advisers; how nice political considerations influence their choice and reduce to lowest terms the number of available candidates.

One of the most important conclusions reached by Mr. Smith is that most Presidents have followed one of two methods in forming their official families: that of Mr. Lincoln and his predecessors, who surrounded themselves with party leaders and former Presidential candidates; and that of Mr. McKinley, who appointed strong, broad-gauged men, regardless of previous political prominence.

This article will appear in an early issue of The Saturday Evening Post.

Fireman Injured.

A singular and distressing accident occurred here Saturday evening while the engine of passenger train No. 16 was taking wood and water at the water tank just after starting out from the depot. The railroad wood is loaded on small cars which run on an elevated track whence they are dumped directly into the tender. The cars are dumped by the brakeman, while the fireman arranges the wood. On this occasion, the fireman, Joe Stafford, had piled up the front tier ready to receive the contents of the car, but had gone to take some wood from one of the side tiers which had been piled so high as to interfere with the proper dumping of the wood. The brakeman, thinking all was ready, dumped the car, holding perhaps
