

Col. Brodie's Two Wounds

Famous Rough Rider's Story of Two Thrilling Episodes in the Spanish War.

"It was a strange coincidence," said Col. Brodie, the second in command of the famous rough riders...

"We had been cooped up at Fort Apache for over four months without any mail; the men were getting restless—guess it was enough to make them restless, too, for we expected the whole herd of Apaches down on us at any time."

CONSUMPTION

is almost as deadly as ever, although physicians know they can cure it generally, beginning when most of the lungs are still sound, and even sometimes when a great deal of damage is done.

The people don't know it yet. They have been told; but they don't believe it; they don't act on it.

Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil is one of the principal means of cure.

There are other helps: dry air, sunshine, country, sleep, regular habits, right clothing.

took a few shots at us, then went into camp just over a hill from where we were camped. We could hear them holding powwows and singing while making preparations to dangle our scalps in their belts the next day.

"I remember I sat looking into the campfire that night, wishing I was back home and wondering what in thunder do, when the old sergeant came over to me and asked:

"Lieutenant, you don't think we can lick that bull outfit, do you?"

"No, sergeant, I don't. What do you think we'd better do?"

"Well, I think we had better build up a big fire, so they kin see it, then drift out of this."

"And we did. We struck a trail and followed it all that night. About daylight we found ourselves on a hill top and right in the center of an old, deserted Indian village. It was that night's trip that first gave me my high appreciation of the much maligned old government mail. Every mile in that pack train seemed to understand the situation and there wasn't a whimper or a bray from any one of the lot until we had put a good night's travel between us and that gang of redskins.

We didn't have any more trouble in getting back to the fort, though we crossed a number of warm trails of hands. I met the chief when he came into the fort a long time after he had peace, and he told me how many times he had shot at me on that trip and couldn't understand how it was that he never got me.

"The wound that I got at Los Guaymas, in the attack on another lucky one, you remember, Sellers, how A and B troops of the regiment were lined up that day at the foot of the hill, and we were getting a perfect hell of fire from the Spanish entrenched up on top of the hill? Well, I was walking up and down before my battalion, and had orders to hold them fast to prevent our right flank from the enfilade fire on the right. I had just turned around and waved my glove at them to hold fast, and dropped my hand to my side again, when a Mauser struck me in the arm. If I hadn't dropped my arm just as I did, the ball would have cut me straight through the center. It turned me around and knocked me down, but in a short time I gathered myself up, went to the rear to see how badly I was hit, and found that the bone was badly shattered. It was three days before I had the wound attended to. There was a lump on the inside of my arm, and when the surgeon examined it he said it was a piece of bone sticking out, and that he would have to cut it out. He made a cut across the lump and out popped the bullet, wrong end first. It had come straight, as most of them do, it would never have stopped in the arm, but went on straight through me.

"The following day I wandered around back of the firing line trying to help the poor fellows that were worse off than I was. I remember seeing one of the A troops—back O'Neill's company, coming down the road with tears running down his cheeks and I thought he must be wounded badly. He saw me and yelled:

"Hello, major, here is the firing line!" I told him it was away on ahead in the other direction, but the fight was over.

"Then he seemed to feel worse than ever, and broke out with as choice a lot of ornamental curs words as I ever heard a mule driver get rid of, and wound up by saying:

"It's a shame that a feller comes all the way from Arizona to fight and then gets knocked out, and that he would have to get out of here with a few yards of the firing line.

"That forced march was the hardest I ever saw. Packed down with about 200 pounds of blankets, rations and other stuff in that hot country, we double-quick right by the regulars, that were coming up at a good stiff gait, too, right straight into trouble. Fellows would drop out of the ranks along the line of march like they were shot, some of 'em wouldn't come to for a day or two after and some never were right afterwards.

"Teddy Roosevelt came over to my tent at four o'clock in the morning after the fight and woke me up to tell me that the Arizona boys made his regiment. He said he knew that I knew it, but wanted to tell me that he knew it and wanted to tell it first.

"There's a fellow, that Teddy, full of life, vigor and energy, that enjoys living and fighting. I was in New York after he was elected governor and went over to Albany to call on him at the capital. I hardly expected to see him, as he was busy, but thought I'd just send in my card to let him know I was in town. I met the secretary at the door and asked him to take in my card to the governor. He told me there was no use the governor was busy on some important case or other, and there were several delegations of lawyers arguing something before him. I insisted that he take in my card, and he handed it to him. He took a look at it and went in. In a minute he came back with a smile on his face and said that the governor wanted me to come right in.

"When I went in he squinted across the room to see who it was, held up his hands at the fellows talking, and rushed across the room to me with both hands stuck out—the same old Teddy I knew in Cuba. After he talked a few minutes he turned, waved his hand at the waiting lawyers with a look on his face as much as to say: 'See what rot I have to stand all the time,' then said: 'It's fun being governor, though, and I rather like it.'"

"This thing that came would get me, but I've not enough of it. All I want now is for that mine near Wicksberg to pan out and I'll be satisfied."

SQUIRE'S WIFE TIED KNOT.

North Carolina Woman Marries a Couple in Absence of Her Husband.

Squire Wife Baller is a North Carolina trial justice who lives in the neighborhood known as Squiretown, which is 20 miles from any town.

Half of his house hangs in Chesterfield county, S. C., and the other in the Tar-Heel state.

The state of North Carolina requires a license to be obtained for marriages. In South Carolina there is no such restriction.

Because of his location Baller has found that fees for marriages constitute a large part of his income.

North Carolina couples who are unable or unwilling to pay for a license, or who are in an especial hurry, are invited into the South Carolina side of the house and there the service is performed.

Every thing went smoothly until a few days ago. In the absence of the magistrate a young couple drove hastily up and demanded marriage in South Carolina. The squire's wife told them her husband was away. She said that she could perform the service, as she knew by heart, and also knew the sliding scale of charges.

The young persons were satisfied; they were taken into the house and married.

Several days later, says a Philadelphia North American special, the girl's father heard that a woman had played minister at his daughter's marriage. He promptly procured a license and a preacher and had the knot retied.

Mrs. Baller has been notified not to do any more marrying, but she cannot understand why.
