Her unble and adat, the Countest Dagmar (whose merry brown eyes were so full of pretended dismay that the princess could scarcely restrain a smile), and Guspon, the minister of finance, were awaiting her appearance. She heard the count's story of the cacape, marveled at the prisoner's nuducity and firmly appounced that evcrything possible should be done to apprehend him. With a perplexed frown on her brown and a dubious twist to her

"I suppose I must offer a reward?" "Certainly?" exclaimed her uncle. "About 50 garves, uncle?"

"Fifty!" eried the two men, aghast. "Isn't that enough?"

"For the murderer of a prince?" demanded Gaspon. "It would be absurd your highness. He is a most important

"Quite so. He is a most important person. I think I'll offer 5,000 gavvos." "More like it. He is worth that, at least." agreed Uncle Caspar.

"Beyond a doubt," sanctioned Gas-"I om glad you do not consider me extravagant," she said demursly, "You may have the pineards printed at once,"

she went on, addressing the freasurer. "Say that a reward of 5,000 garver will be paid to the person who delivers Grenfull Lorry to me." "Would it not be better to say 'de-

"Heard about Lorry? The fool is out and gone!" he cried, unable to restrain bimself. Without a word she dragged him to the divan, and, between them, he soon had the whole story poured into his ears, the princess on one side, the countess on the other.
"You are a wonder!" he exclaimed ien all the facts were known to him. He executed a little dance of approval, entirely out of place in the boudeir of a princess, but very much in touch with prevailing sentiment. "But what's to become of me?" he noted after cool-ing down. "I have no excuse for re-Ining in Graustark, and I don't like to leave him here either."

"Oh, I have made plans for you," said she. "You are to be held as hos-OWnativ.

"I thought of your predicament last night, and here is the solution: This very day I shall issue an order forbidding you the right to leave Edelweiss. You will not be in prison, but your every movement is to be watched. A strong guard will have you under survelliance, and any attempt to escape or communicate with your friend will result in your confinement and his detection. In this way you may stay here until the time comes to fly. The Axplain people must be satisfied, you low. Your freedom will not be disturbed. From Denver to St. Louis With a Friend of Yours

That's how you go when you go with the Burlington, for it has you in its care all the way. It's the only road that can do this because it's the only road that tuns its own trains over its own rails the whole distance. This means Burlington service all the way - and that you know, is thoroughly good.

Two trains daily-ine leaving in the afternoon and arriving the next day; the other leaving in the evening and arriving the second

Both trains are made up of standard sleeping cars, reclining chair cars (seats free) day coaches-and carry Burlington dining cars, serving splendid meals at moderate prices. Let me answer any questions you care to ask about your trip east.
