Collis P. Huntington, late president of the Southern Pacific Railway Company, and one of America's greatest financier's, said in 1857, of the cultivation of rubber trees: "If I had my life to live over I would not wear it away in the hard struggle that falls to the lot of a railroad promoter. I would go into the tropics of Mexico and grow rubber. It is better than gold, and it will make more millionaires than cil has made."

"Three hundred rubber trees will yield $450 annually,"—Henry D. Bushnell.

"There are few agricultural ventures today more attractive to capitalists than rubber planting. It seems to be an absolutely sure thing."

-N. Y. Evening Post, June 15, 1902.

"Within the past year rubber has within the cast year runner has advanced from S0 cents to $1.11. A rubber plantation is a mine which is continually producing."—George C. Woolsen, President Manhattan Rebber Works. "One hundred thousand rubber trees the first year's harvest will yield $120,000 ($240 per nere)."—British Foreign Office Report, No. 385, page

"There is absolutely no question but that the fortunate owners of a producing rubber plantation will realize fabulous profits annually."— Chicago Journal, Dec. 10, 1898.

"If I were a young man I would invest my money in a rubber plantation as it is better than a bank or most anything else."—Russell Sage.

"Rubber culture is probably the safest investment that can be made as no reasonable contingency can arise to limit the demand."—Hon. Wm. P. Wilson, Sec. Philadelphia Commer-cial Museum

"At the first tapping after the trees have reached the age of six or seven years, a net profit of $300 gold per acre is made. As the yield per tree increases yearly, the profits also increase in proportion."—Bareau American Republic, Washington, D.

"The caltivation of India rabber is probably the most profitable industry in the world."—Dering, British Minister to Mexico.

"The life of a rubber tree is impossible to estimate; trees growing wild in the forest, here, seem to be hundreds of years old and still give milk as frequently as those of later cultivation."—J.s. C. McNally, U. S. Consol General, Guatemala.

"The profits derived from the culture of rubber are fabu'ous, even assuming that instead of advancing in price, rather were certain to retain or even to decline to 50c per pound, the profit would still be enormous."—A. M. Fergasen, English planter in Colom-bo, Ceylon.
