Which Costs the Most?

The question is often asked, Which causes the most destruction, war or intemperance? The question suggests the answer. From the very beginning of history war has been celebrated for its destructiveness. Men and nations have fought each other to the death, on almost the slightest provocation. Whole armies have been swept from the face of the earth by the restless onrush of the billows of war.

War is an awful thing! It takes husbands from wives, sons from mothers, lovers from sweethearts, and heaps them on gory fields, victims to the lust of power and of unholy ambition. War is an unspcakably terrible thing; and it has carried millions of men into untimely graves or left their bodies to rot in pathless swamps or to bleach on desert wastes.

War inflames the fiercest passions, but many a time men have fought in the defense of sacred hearthstones. The sword has often been drawn to gratify mere passion for power and military glory, or for wanton destruction; but as often it has been unsheathed in the defense of human rights. Every sacred cause for which the men and women of our own time are willing to live or die—every such cause has been won by the sacrifice of blood and treasure. So war, with all its horrors and all its destruction—the sacking of rich provinces, and the blotting out of countless lives—brings also its measure of blessings. Out of its Titan struggles have come the heroes of many nations and the victories that make liberty sure and precious, and life rich with the blessings of peace and prosperity.

And the brutalities of war are becoming less brutal from century to century. Soldiers may live their lives through without smelling the smoke of battle. The war demon is not always using his implements of destruction—is not always hurling his thunderbolts at the heads of the innocent and the helpless. War has some sort of respect for womanhood and childhood. Not so the Drink Demon. Intemperance is the boon companion of war, multiplying the horrors of battle, making disaster doubly disastrous. But when—

"Grim-visaged War hath smoothed his wrinkled front," and ended his work of slaughter, he gives the angels of mercy time to bathe and bind up the wounds of the victims of his fury. But intemperance drowns its slain in a flood of infamy, and starves the wives and mothers and children who strive with all the heroism of undying love to save the husbands, sons, and fathers who have become the prey of a monster more frightful than war in its worst state.

In our own land an army of more than 40,000 men is engaged in the work of making the liquors in which every year another army twice as large drowns itself. We complain because our own great civil war in behalf of liberty and union has left us an annual burden in interest and pensions of something like two hundred millions of dollars; yet we hardly realize that we are paying four or five times as much as the price of our bondage to the Demon Drink. War buries its slain in honored graves, and builds monuments to commemorate their heroism; but the larger armies of the victims of intemperance are buried in unnumbered sepulchers. The widows and orphans of the men who die in military camps or in the heat of battle are cared for by the people, who are never unwilling to contribute to their abundance in this sacred cause; but the widows and orphans of the men who are slain by drink are left to fight the fiercest battle of life without help and with the sting of poverty is added to the sting of sorrow and disgrace.

When you have numbered the millions of money that are wasted every year in the service of the Demon Drink, and have compared them with the number spent under the banners of the Demon War, you will find that intemperance is more costly than war. When you have measured the waste of property, of time, and of priceless manhood, you will find that war is a little thing compared with intemperance. And when you have added to the waste of treasure and of manhood, which intemperance causes, the waste of joy and gladness and education, of pride in life and honor and opportunity, which millions of women and children should have but do not—then you will begin to appreciate the awfulness of the havoc wrought in every land by the terrible Demon Drink, to which we politely give the name Intemperance.—D. W. Working.

Children

Have you bigger than their stomachs? "According to an old saying, they over-occupy themselves, and are tempted by all sorts of injurious and indigestible edibles. As a consequence the foundation of serious stomach trouble is often laid in childhood.

For children with "weak" digestion or whose stomachs are diseased, Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery may be confidently recommended. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition.

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery contains neither alcohol nor narcotics.

DON'T LEAD THE WEAK LIFE

A Fatal Habit to Form in That of Self-Defeat.

"We are but sketches of what one day, after the hand lines have been away, God, the Designer, would have us to be; only in charcoal, rude and rough. The more vigorous of the greater skill. A beautiful life is one that fulfills its mission. 'Every man's life is a plan of God,' is a familiar saying. One who attains that for which he was made, lives beautifully, however lowly his life may be. Completeness is beauty. The meaning of the word 'win' is to keep God's commandments, to do God's will, to realize God's purpose. We miss the mark and the beauty is marred. 'Transgression' is a like word, meaning stepping out of the path, over the boundary that is not walking as God directs, falling to the right according to the divine plan and pattern. 'Iniquity' has also a similar suggestion—unwisdom, injustice, not according to the law of right, and therefore unbecomingly.

There are some special words which may be said to hold the secret of beauty in a life, the 'victoriousness.' Many people let themselves be defeated almost habitually. It begins in childhood. The lessons are hard and the child does not master them. It costs exertion to succeed in the games, and the boy indolently concludes that he cannot win, and does not do his best. The girl finds that the constant play has no interest in it, and she gives up. It is only a remedy I have found that gives immediate relief. $25, 50c, $1.00.
