A lecture on Christian Science by Miss Mary Brookins, O. S. B., of Minneapolis, will be given in the Opera House Monday evening, Sept. 25th, under the auspices of the First Christian Science Association, of Grants Pass, Ore. The association extends a cordial invitation to the public.

The Amity paper reports a farmer in that section raised this season eight tons of vetch hay from 1 1/2 acres of land. Many farms here have had quite as good success with vetch. It should be sown not later than this month to get the largest growth for it is a winter growing plant, and it will yield the second and third crop when irrigated.

The Willamette Development League will hold its third convention at Eugene, September 29th and 30th, with three very interesting programs on which the most prominent men of the state discuss methods for the development of Western Oregon. This will be one of the most important conventions ever held, and Grants Pass is invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Ingalls arrived July 1st from Boulder, Colo., but for the past month have been at the Greenback mine. Mr. Ingalls is a graduate of Drake University of Des Moines, Iowa, and has had a practical experience as assayer and chemist.

The Roseburg Plaindealer has this to say of our Robert, "Josephine Smith," and of his professional aspirations: "Robert Glen Smith the well known Democratic State center of Grants Pass who is becoming himself for Congress to succeed Hon. Blagot Hermann has been in this city during this week on his way to Portland, leaving for that place Tuesday night. Mr. Smith has sold his paper, the Grants Pass Herald, to Henry Smith, who will attempt the publication of a daily paper at Grants Pass."

That Rogue River Valley is the natural home of the grape is proven by the vigorous growth and healthy vines of both the wild and the tame grapes that are to be found in this Valley. A sample of a grape vine showing the wonderful growth that has been made this year is on display at Jos. Moss' real estate office. This vine is 21 1/2 feet long, all of this year's growth but had it been allowed to grow for the remainder of the season, would have added another foot or more in length. It is from a vine in John Patric's yard, who resides on North Eighth street. The vine grew in the dooryard without cultivation, irrigation or special care.

TIMES AND TOGS

What they were and what they are--A Difference

We might emphasize the importance of comparison by going back to primitive days were it necessary, or perhaps not so far back.

HART SCHAFFNER & MARX clothes have the "ear-marks" of today, their method for making modern clothes is not necessarily unlike that of others, but enough of that difference exists to make their clothes distinctive

In the long run, excellence and worth are the only things that count.

When a customer of ours tries on a suit and realizes that it fits perfectly and looks fine, and we give him an unqualified guarantee of its quality, he will go away pleased with him self and with us.

When he finds it wears and retains its shape and continues to give him service, he becomes another of our faithful patrons so long as he gets the same satisfaction.

It is this kind of clothing that we sell, merchandise that fulfills the modern clothes educated public demand for the best that's made.

You can't make a mistake by placing us on your calling list when you are ready for a Fall or Winter Suit.
