THOMAS & O'NEILL

GRANTS PASS STATION BRILLIANTLY LIGHTED

Few Oregon Towns Have So Well Lighted Depot Grounds—Good Ad. for City.

In no town in Oregon are the depot grounds and switch yard better lighted than is the station at Grants Pass, and very few places are lighted as well. While the railroad grounds are quite extensive, embracing eight acres, yet all the main part where the depot, round house, water tank, coal and wood bunkers and switches are located, is well lighted. This fine lighting comes from the arc light that the city has installed on Sixth street, at the railroad crossing, and the arc light that the Southern Pacific has put up at the west end of the depot, supplemented by the arc street lights on North and South Sixth street and West G street and the incandescent lights on the other streets adjoining the depot ground. The big electric sign of 85 high power incandescent lights on the front of the Condor Water & Power Company's office building and transformer station also aids very materially in lighting the depot grounds.

In addition to being a very great convenience to the trainmen and all the railroad employes about the round house and to the traveling public, this bright light gives the depot grounds a cheerful appearance at night and dispels that gloomy aspect so noticeable about the stations in many towns. Strangers passing through the city on the three night passenger trains will now be able to see something of Grants Pass and this evidence of progressiveness will give them a very favorable impression of this city.

Coughing Spell Caused Death

Harry Duckwell, aged 25 years, choked to death early yesterday morning at his home, in the presence of his wife and child. He contracted a slight cold a few days ago and paid but little attention to it. Yesterday morning he was seized with a fit of coughing which continued for some time. His wife sent for a physician but before he could arrive, another coughing spell came on and Duckwell died from suffocation.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat, Dec. 1, 1901. Ballard's Horehound Syrup would have saved him. 25c, 50c, and $1.00 at Rotermund's and at Model Drug Store.

Farmers are busy gathering up their stock on the range, which has done well as the weather has been fine. No storms yet and miners are wishing for rain while farmers don't want rain. So it goes, perhaps the Lord knoweth best. Wide Awake.
