The Hen is Relegated.

The science of poultry raising has so developed that it is no longer profitable to have a hen put in large part of the best laying season of the year in hatching and raising a brood of chickens. The up-to-date poultryman now has a machine to do that work and does it better and more economically than biddy and leaves egg business and produce thrive the number that her not distant ancestors did.

A practical demonstration has been given in egg hatching in the show window of Cramer Bros. hardware store that clearly proves that the Petaluma incubator will hatch a larger percent of eggs than the average hen. Of a batch of 97 eggs 91 strong, healthy chicks were produced last Friday and Saturday. Of a batch hatched three weeks previous 35 chicks were had from 40 eggs. The Petaluma incubator is exceedingly simple to operate and with reasonable care will hatch a chick for almost every egg placed in it. The price is so low that every poultry raiser can afford to have one and the cost for oil and the time to care for it is so little that the operating expense is hardly noticeable. The many farmers who have bought the Petaluma incubator and found it a profitable investment is proof of the superiority of the machine over the hen in chicken raising. Cramer Bros. have just received by special order, the largest incubator made, having 504 eggs capacity.

DOMESTIC TROUBLE ENDS IN A SHOOTING

Edward Williams Takes a Shot at W. D. Harrington Inflicting Slight Wound.

A shooting scrape Wednesday night was the outcome of the domestic troubles of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Williams, and W. D. Harrington got a bullet in his right thigh, making a severe flesh wound and had the missile gone a little deeper it would have severed an artery or crashed through the bone and then Harrington might have died from its effects. Harrington came up town and had the wound dressed and later Sheriff Lewis and Patrolman Wolridge learning of the affair went to Williams' home and arrested him and put him in the county jail. The examination took place this Thursday afternoon before Justice Clements who placed Williams under $1500 bonds to appear at the July term of circuit court on a charge of attempted manslaughter. The facts as shown by the evidence were that Harrington had come to town from the Granite Hill mine where he is working and called about 9 p. m. at the residence of Hollis Nutt on I and Mill streets where Mrs. Williams is stopping, to deliver a message to her from her sister. They went for a walk down the street and as they were on the sidewalk near L. C. Brown's house on I street, Williams overtook them on a wheel and quickly dismounting and drawing a revolver fired three shots at Harrington. The first shot struck Harrington in the thigh and the other shots missed him as he was by that time doing some rapid running. Mrs. Williams fled to a residence and Williams went to his home not knowing that he had shot Harrington until the officers came to arrest him.

Mrs. Wilson of Ashland responded to this in a few well-chosen words. The morning session was taken up largely with reports from officers, and local societies and the election of officers for the ensuing year.

In the afternoon, among other good things was an address by Mrs. Hayes, who came from Portland as special representative of the Pacific Board, and a paper by Mrs. Prescott on her work in Utah.
