"The Holy City."

We have not a column of space to spare for a proper comment on the play of last evening, though the object would be a worthy one. Our people have been surfeited with entertainments this week and therefore the house was not properly filled to greet this splendid Bible play. It was a strenuous performance from start to finish—one of those strong plays which hold interest at a high tension throughout. The leading parts were strenuous and the fire of religious fervor was met with an equal fire of fanatical bigotry well carried to the tragic end. The Marias of Edgar Jones was of the sort to excite the admiration of those who adore manly beauty and noble demeanor. It was a strong part, played without a fault. The same might almost be said of Salome, the wicked and sinuous beauty—the incarnation of love and devilishness well mixed. Even the traitor Judas was a most commendable actor, with the part of the most infamous villain that ever lived in history. As John the Baptist and as his exact opposite none but an actor of merit could present the both true to the life.

But all the parts were commendable—especially so the little mother of John; but space fails, and 'tis but the passing show, though one deserving of the largest possible audiences wherever it may entertain. The church people should attend and take their families. No sermon or Bible reading can equal such a performance—one that sends all home with the thought that they have seen something almost too good and sacred for the common stage.—Washingtonian.

The first number on the entertainment course, the Lulu Tyler Gates Company, appeared at the opera house last Saturday to a full house and abundantly fulfilled the expectations of the committee who had the choosing of the course. The entertainment was of a high order, the character selections by Mrs. Gates were perfection and the cello selections by Edith Adams were very enjoyable.

On Monday there was an exhibition by C. L. Mangum about 12 pounds of gold ore which was quite remarkable in that it contained some $700 in gold. The ore comes from a mine which is tributary to Grants Pass and was discovered about a year ago, but that is as much as can be learned of the strike. As Mr. Mangum says "the mine is not for sale and the least said the better, but I want to let the people know that there is plenty of gold here notwithstanding the knockers."
