IN SOCIAL CIRCLES

A pretty home wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Dean, on Sunday afternoon, September 29, when their daughter, Blanche, was united in marriage to Thomas Harvey of Marshfield. The wedding was a quiet one, only the immediate relatives and a few invited guests being present.

At 2 o'clock the bridal party took their places before the officiating minister, who pronounced the words which united for life, two of Grants Pass' most esteemed young people. Mr. Harvey, who is engaged in the hardware business at Marshfield, was, until the past few months a resident of this city, having been salesman with the Grants Pass Hardware Co., and he is well known here as a young man of sterling worth and exceptionally fine character. The bride has lived in this city since childhood and is beloved and respected by all who know her and was a leader in the social circles in which she moved.

In preference to facing the shower of rice which was sure to greet them at the Grants Pass depot, the young people left immediately after the ceremony, by carriage for Merlin, from which place they took the train north, where they will visit Portland, Seattle, and other northern points, before taking up their abode at Marshfield, their future home. The bride and groom were the recipients many beautiful presents.

In leaving Grants Pass, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey are followed by the deep regrets of a host of friends, but they also wish for them all the happiness and prosperity that comes to truly wedded life.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY

What People say.

Robert Morris, of R. F. D. No. 1, in referring to it that his subscription was extended to 1908, remarked to the Courier man that he always managed to pay for his paper in advance and that he seemed to enjoy reading it more when he knew that it was paid for. In fact he said it had been one of the rules of his life to see that his bills were paid for as they were contracted, but of all of them, if any had to wait a bit, he was sure to try and see that the newspaper was not allowed to get behind.

Fred T. Harris, a prominent architect of Redlands, Cal., who has been looking over the Pacific northwest, with the idea of locating, finding in the Courier reporter an old friend, did not hesitate to declare that he regarded this immediate vicinity as the most inviting of any locality he had yet visited, and he has been to most of them. He is of the opinion that there is a great future in store for this region and already he thinks that the tide of immigration this way has set in and that hereafter it will be Oregon and not California that will be so much talked about. He plans to come back here and "get in on the ground floor."

"You would be simply amazed at the remarkable increase in the volume of business in our office," was the way Assistant Postmaster W. A. Newell talked to the newsgatherer. Mr. Newell went on to state that the increase had been wonderful and that it was getting greater all the time. He thinks that this state of affairs will keep up right along, if he may judge by the large number of new people who are trying to secure boxes at the postoffice, where none are to be had. The condition of affairs at Uncle Sam's office is always taken as an indication of the progress of the community, or otherwise, and so Grants Passites can secure much real satisfaction from the way things are going at the local office.

"I tell you people cannot begin to imagine what we railroad people have to put up with," remarked G. C. Morris, assistant superintendent of the S. P. lines in Oregon. "There seems to be a disposition on the part of all the large papers to find fault, even though they know that we are doing our best to give the public good service. You see, if the roads back east were not having such an enormous volume of business, too, it would go easier with us, but as it is, they have need for all their rolling stock and we western roads have to get along the best way we can. But we will keep on trying, to meet the increased demands and hope eventually to be able to cope with them, successfully."

"That cartoon on the front page of the Courier reminds me of the way the Medfordites talk about your town," said a newcomer who accosted the newsgatherer. "Why, to hear them talk up there, you people aren't in it for one minute. They say you have nothing to back you and all such stuff. But, when I came here, I found that they were simply giving me some hot air, for which they are rapidly gaining a wide reputation. To my way of seeing things, Grants Pass has more real, genuine backing than has Medford and what is more, I mean to invest here, where I can get really at something like its real value and not have to pay two prices, as they are asking up there for no better land. And say, by the way, did you know that they are circulating all kinds of reports about Grants Pass not being a healthful place in which to live. They say you have an epidemic of spinal meningitis and their daily paper is harping upon the matter. But I find that you have only had one such case here and that, on the whole, the death rate here is much lower than it is at Medford. All such misrepresentation will hurt Medford more than I can begin to tell and the sooner they stop such practices, the better it will be for them, or I am no judge of human nature. Such nonsense turned me against the place and it will have the same effect with people who are able to think and act for themselves."
