

solves into a peaceable herd almost as quickly as it wound itself into a frantic mob.

To be caught inside such a mill is death. Fortunately Harriet Renwyck was on the outskirts. The situation was sufficiently terrifying as it was, however. Above the dust she could see a tossing, quivering expanse of horned heads.

She was utterly terrified, yet she realized that her only possible hope of salvation was to keep her senses and her seat. If she fainted and fell the result would be death. The love of life was strong in her, and she clung to her saddle and prayed as never before.

This was reassurance, but not much. The prospect seemed hopeless. The cattle were going slower now as she worked toward the center, which was yet a great way off. Her pony was wedged in so tightly that he could not fall.

As they drew near the two cowboys recognized that this was one of the worst mills they had ever witnessed. There was a little dip to the ground where the cattle had swerved that had thrown them even more violently toward the center than would have occurred on level prairie.

He swept her to his breast at last and held her.

at the figure of the girl, as a cavalier man rides down an obstacle, but he knew that such a step would be fatal. The mill must be broken. It must be unbound. The first man swung his pony in toward the outer edge and raced with it, seeking an opening near the woman, to whom he cried words of encouragement.

They worked desperately. Men always work desperately under such circumstances, but in this instance it was with added incentive. The first, the nearest man to her, divined rather than saw as he caught glimpses of her face, deathly pale through the dust, that she could not keep up much longer.

doubled energy he bored his way in and in. The outer edge where he ran was well broken now, but two lines of steers intervened between him and the girl. Sweat poured from his face like water. His heart thumped as no stampeding cattle could have caused it to beat on any range.

What of the woman? Was he too late? He saw her away in the saddle. She would be thrown on the edge of the circle and trampled to death! Leaving the mill to unwind itself, he leaped his pony toward her just in time, for as he approached she pitched forward and fell. Providence threw her to the right rather than to the left.

They were now in the angle formed by the tangent and the circle, and the way was clear before them. He spurred his tired horse, which had done such splendid work, out into the open and stopped. He did not dare put the girl down yet—not until the cattle had completely unbound themselves and the jam had been broken.

Fortune, however, had subjected Miss Renwyck to all the trials demanded of her that day, for the herd of panting cattle, blindly following new leaders, presently unbound itself and streamed across the prairie, going slower and slower, as the panic impulse subsided almost as quickly as it had arisen.

"She's all right," he said, "only fainting. You ride after the bunch. Head 'em off before they leave the range. I'll look after the lady. I'll follow you presently."

With the other's assistance he lowered the girl to the grass and dismounted himself. Miss Harriet Renwyck was not exactly at her best at that moment. She was as white as a cotton boll where her pallor could be seen for the dust. Her glorious black hair was unbound and flowed in wild disorder about her.

"You're all right, miss," said the cowboy soothingly as she gazed at him with dawning comprehension. "Drink this," he added as he compelled her to take a pull at his flask, which fortunately happened to be not quite empty, although the day was no longer young.

"It was only a little mill, miss," said the cowboy. "We broke it easily." "Where is my father?" asked the girl hastily. "Where is my horse?" "As for your father, I didn't see him. I guess your pony has gone with the herd. But you're welcome to mine. Hello, here are your friends. I reckon!" he exclaimed as he saw two or three horsemen galloping over the rise beyond.

What Do They Cure?

The above question is often asked concerning Dr. Pierce's leading medicines, "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Favorite Prescription."

The answer is that "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most potent alterative or blood-purifier, and tonic or invigorator and acts especially favorably in a curative way upon all the mucous lining surfaces, as of the nasal passages, throat, bronchial tubes, stomach, bowels and bladder.

A book of particulars wraps each bottle giving the formulae of both medicines and quoting a vast array of eminent medical authorities, the books are consulted by physicians of all the schools of practice as guides in prescribing, say of each ingredient entering into these medicines.

Both medicines are non-alcoholic, non-secret, and contain no harmful habit-forming drugs, being composed of glyceric extracts of the roots of native, American medicinal forest plants. They are both sold by dealers in medicine.
