

sense! She liked this smooth shaven Englishman, and yet she could like an unshaven cowboy too.

When they finished luncheon they repaired to the paddock, and Hawk was led from the stable, two grooms hanging warily to the double halter straps. He was a powerful roan, with a glossy coat and massive shoulders.

The small head told of blood and spirit. The ears lay back, and the white of his eyes gleaming wickedly seemed to bear out Mr. Renwyck's statement as to his nasty temper.

"Umph!" said Richard critically. "Looks as if he wanted to put the gloves on us, doesn't he?"

Richard nodded. "Just saddle him, will you, my good man? I fancy Hawk and I will hit it off together nicely."

The horse was led into the center of the spongy paddock, where the dangerous task of saddling was completed. Richard rejected the bit chosen by the groom, selecting another with a deeper curb. Then he buckled on a pair of spurs and looked to the girth himself.

"Half an hour, did you say, Mr. Renwyck? I'm afraid you are about to lose a valuable horse."

"And I'm afraid," muttered the other under his breath, "that the house of lords is about to lose a valuable member."

"No fear," said Richard softly, catching his remark.

"Be careful of the stirrup, sir," warned the deferential groom. "He'll shy when you raise your foot, sir."

Richard thanked the man, stepped near the horse quietly and for a moment stroked his neck. The animal stood with drooping head and a look of docile innocence which to a practiced eye was a precursor of certain mischief. There was an instant's pause. The young man gathered up the reins, stooped slightly, then suddenly shot upward, landing squarely in the saddle and slipping his feet into the swinging stirrups. It was a familiar range trick and deftly carried out.

It is difficult to say which were the more astonished, the grooms, Mr. Renwyck or Hawk himself, who squatted, reared and wheeled sharply to the left. Falling in the first attempt to rid himself of an unwelcome burden, the animal reared again, spinning on the pivot of his heels, but stopped at the stab of steel between his ribs.

Then began a battle which caused Miss Renwyck to hold her breath in admiration and alarm and her mother nearly to faint with terror. Her father forgot his wager and his dignity and danced in excitement, shouting encouragement to the daring rider. The roan, now thoroughly enraged, sought by every equine trick he knew to unseat his master, but in vain. If he bolted to right or left he felt a weight swing inward at the turn; if he reared two maddening spurs were dug into his flanks, while the effort to lower his head was checked by an iron hand.

Presently the horse stood still, as though he were thinking deeply, then suddenly plunged away on a dead straight line. For twenty yards he raced, then spread out his legs and slid, in the budding hope that his rider might continue on, but in this he was bitterly disappointed. He felt the agony of a cruel curb that gripped his tongue and found himself forced back upon his haunches, while his tenacious rider still remained astride his back.

Now, Hawk was not a single minded brute and had, so to speak, another project up his sleeve. Without warning he dropped upon the turf and rolled. Richard jumped. He alighted upon his feet, ran backward to avoid the vicious hoofs, and as the horse rose he mounted with a flying vault, while from his audience came a cheer that was music to the vanity of man and a further irritation to the horse. The roan repeated his experiment the second time, but with the same result, then once more bolted on the run, this time for the four foot fence of the paddock. To dash his rider against a rough oak post was a most commendable design in a horse, but the rider was otherwise disposed. The Texan gave his steed a loose, free rein, but as he neared the barrier checked him sharply and applied the spur. Hawk quivered, crouched, then took the fence like a soaring bird.

Outside a smooth road stretched away till lost behind the crest of a distant hill. Up this highway the big roan thundered as though old Tam o' Shanter covered upon his back, with a horde of witches streaming far out behind.

The heart of Richard had been stung with a conqueror's joy, and doubtless his reckless tongue might have taken up the song but for an unexpected check. As he landed in the road beyond the fence he spied a little red faced man who had clapped applause with two plump white hands. It was not so much the gentleman himself that troubled Richard's mind, but the thought of a doubtful compliment shouted down the wind:

BLOCKADED

Every Household in Grants Pass Should Know How to Resist it.

The back aches because the kidneys are blocked. Help the kidneys with their work. The back will ache no more. Lots of proof that Doan's Kidney Pills do this.

Andrew J. Hayden, veteran of the Civil War and of several Indian campaigns, living on Flint St., near Mosier, Roseburg, Ore., says "I have always enjoyed the best of health and strength and have been pretty well of late years except for a trouble with the kidneys and bladder. I do not know what caused it but the secretions became cloudy and showed a sediment when allowed to stand. I had pains through the bladder, indicating inflammation of some nature, and passages of the secretions were too frequent, causing much trouble at night. I was led through hearing Doan's Kidney Pills recommended by Roseburg people to get a supply. They went to work right from the start and relieved the pain and the secretions were corrected. I kept on with the treatment and am now able to rest through an entire night without annoyance. The pain has entirely vanished and I feel better in every way." For sale by all dealers. His Concession. Miss Sallie Miller, the acknowledged belle of the town, had fewer beaux than were her due. This was owing to her father's peculiar aversion to all young men who called on his daughter. He had a disconcerting way of taking possession of the porch and snubbing her callers while they were waiting for her to come down.

One evening Newton Brown, a bashful young swain, came a trifle too early for Miss Sallie. Mr. Miller and Newton's father were close friends, but the boy had grown so rapidly that the old gentleman did not recognize little Newt Brown in this tall, gawky youth. "It looks as if it might rain," the young fellow ventured timidly.

"Tain't a-goin' to rain," was the gruff response.

For about a quarter of an hour they sat in silence. Finally the old man's curiosity got the better of him.

"Who are you, anyway?" he growled.

"Newton Brown, sir."

"What! Not old Jake Brown's son?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, well," said Mr. Miller more kindly; "it may rain; it may rain."—Everybody's Magazine.

A Cossack Superstition.

Among the numerous superstitions of the Cossacks there is none stronger than the belief that they will enter heaven in a better state if they are personally clean at the time they are killed.

A Bold Step.

To overcome the well-grounded and reasonable objections of the more intelligent to the use of secret, medicinal compounds, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., some time ago, decided to make a full and complete list of all the ingredients entering into the composition of his widely celebrated medicines. Thus he has taken his numerous patrons and patients into his full confidence. Thus too he has removed his medicines from among secret nostrums of doubtful merits, and made them remedies of known composition.

By this bold step Dr. Pierce has shown that his formulas are not such concoctions as he is not afraid to subject them to the strictest scrutiny.

Not only does the wrapper of every bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the famous medicine for weak stomach, torpid liver or biliousness, and all catarrhal diseases wherever located, have printed upon it in plain English, a full and complete list of all the ingredients composing it, but a small book has been compiled from numerous standard medical works, of all the different schools of practice, containing very numerous extracts from the writings of leading practitioners of medicine, endorsing in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient contained in Dr. Pierce's medicines. One of these little books will be mailed free to any one sending address on postal card or by letter, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and requesting the same. From this little book it will be learned that Dr. Pierce's medicines contain no alcohol, narcotics, mineral agents or other poisonous or injurious ingredients and that they are made from native medicinal roots of great value; also that some of the most valuable medicinal plants entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's medicines are those that are made from native medicinal roots of great value; also that some of the most valuable medicinal plants entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's medicines are those that are made from native medicinal roots of great value; also that some of the most valuable medicinal plants entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's medicines are those that are made from native medicinal roots of great value.

SIMPLE WASH CURES ECZEMA

Itching, Burning Skin Disease Routed Without Use of Injurious Drugs.

Great inventors often have been praised for surrendering the secrets of their discoveries. Practically the same thing happened in the medical world in the case of Dr. Decatur D. Dennis, the eminent skin specialist of Chicago.

Dr. Dennis, in his own office practice, discovered that pure vegetable oil of wintergreen, properly mixed with other simple remedies was practically a sure specific for Eczema, psoriasis, barber's itch, salt rheum and other itching skin diseases. But the oil of wintergreen alone was found ineffective. It required other mild ingredients such as glycerine and thymol compounded with the wintergreen to produce the real eczema cure.

This compounded D. D. D. Prescription positively takes away the itch at once—the instant it is applied to the skin. This vegetable liquid does away with deleterious drugs so long used in an attempt to doctor the blood, whereas modern science has determined that eczema is first and all the time a skin disease.

If you want to know more about the merits of D. D. D. Prescription, call at our store. We vouch for this remedy. Clemens sells drugs. 2-21 8t
