days she mourned. Of course dear Roderick knew nothing about the affair and only left Morrinstown because his leave of absence had expired or because he was angry at the residents or -but, whatever his reason, Miss Imogene was sure it was a good one. However that might be, from Mr. Fitzgerald's point of view it was an imperative one.

With the lapse of time and with the advent of other objects of affection-as her Cornelius Van der Awe, for instance-this love passage was dropped from Miss Chittendon's memory, especially as she had never heard from the recreant Roderick until he was brought rudely to her recollection by the receipt that morning of a fateful letter.

In this document Mr. Roderick Fitzgerald advised her briefly that, owing to several unhappy circumstances, he was forced to leave for the far west and, being lightly supplied with funds, was grateful if she could spare her devoted lover a hundred dollars for the journey.

In case she found it inconvenient he still had in his possession a dozen letters which would not look well if printed in the newspapers. In case she did find it convenient to make the loan, which, knowing her generous nature, her correspondent did not doubt, she was first to tie a piece of white string on the left post of the Rem- wicks' front gate as a signal of assent, then open the library window at 3 o'clock on Friday night, when Mr. Fitzgerald would enter, exchange her letters for the sum above mentioned and bid her an eternal farewell.

If Miss Chittendon played him false-of which perish the thought-a friend had copies of said correspondence which would immediately be published, together with the garbled details of the former romance, a condition undesirable for a lady so widely known in the social world. The letter ended with the hope that Miss Chittendon was enjoying good health and spirits and that she might persuade herself to meet him on Friday, as requested.

To say that Miss Imogene was terrified would be putting it mildly. Her resulting condition bordered upon complete collapse, mental and physical. "Oh, Harriet, Harriet!" she sobbed "Whatever shall I do?" "My dear," returned her friend as she bathed the sufferer's temples with cologne, "it is perfectly simple. You need give yourself no uneasiness. Father will quietly put the matter in the hands of the police. We will then tie the white string on the gatepost, and when this wretch enters the library window he will find himself in the arms of our officers, and we will not only have the letters, but the man."

Bound Over to Court. Police Judge Holman's attention was occupied Monday morning with the hearing of Geo. Cox, a young man charged with assault with a dangerous weapon upon the person of D. B. Winkle, an old man near Merlin Sunday. It seems the two men got into an altercation over some trivial matter when Cox is alleged to have struck Winkle in the chest with a large club, causing the latter to spit blood. Winkle was brought to the county home and constable Colby of Merlin arrested Cox and brought him to Grants Pass. Cox waived examination Monday morning whereupon Judge Holman bound him over to the next term of the circuit court in the sum of $200. Cox furnished the required bond and was released pending his trial at the next term of court.
