THE FOURTH OF JULY AT WILDERVILLE

Enjoyable Time for All Who Attended the Sane Celebration

The Grangers demonstrated at their celebration at Wilderville grove that it is possible to conduct a sane observance of the Fourth of July, and while eliminating the unpleasant things, such as fire crackers, and hoodlums, the money-making and other like features that have come to be a part of the average celebration of that day, to make the day one of enjoyment to old and young and a day for the teaching of patriotism and good citizenship to counteract the growing spirit of anarchy in America that has made it necessary for the government to build a fort near every large city in the United States. The weather was perfect and the crowd of fully 1500 persons were in the best of humor for enjoying themselves to the fullest extent and the exercises of the day were so arranged that there was not a dull period from dawn until midnight when the festivities closed. The order was absolutely perfect and not a man made the least disturbance, for there was not a drop of liquor on or near the grounds. Information had come to the members of the executive committee having in charge the celebration that an attempt would likely be made to conduct "blind pigs" in the adjoining woods but the stringent measures taken scared out the fellows and they went to other celebrations. As a precaution some plain clothes men were engaged to stroll through the adjoining woods from time to time to look for illicit liquor sellers and to provide against contingencies. Arthur Ellisen, J. R. Wells, A. M. Jess and N. A. Stanley were appointed marshals but they had nothing to do only stand around and look pleasant and once in a while admonish a boy to take his fire crackers to that part of the grounds apart for noise purposes. The teams were kept off the main grounds and in a part of the grove for their use and this work was carefully attended to by Emil Genter, Scott Robinson and E. A. Humpton.

A noticeable feature of the day was that there were not a multitude of babies crying and disturbing the speakers and singers and annoying nervous bachelors. And this was not due to there being no babies present for the little ones were there in force, but they were too comfortable to have occasion to cry. That the babies had their comfort attended to was due to the thoughtfulness of the ladies of the rest room committee, Mrs. John H. Robinson, Mrs. Adeline Close, Mrs. Shubel Robinson and Mrs. E. Erickson. These ladies had a large tent erected on the grounds and had it furnished with cots, easy chairs, basins, water, towels and other toilet conveniences and plenty of cool drinking water for the free use of tired mothers and weary babies. That no mother and baby should fail to have an opportunity to take a quiet rest, the ladies of the committee would make trips about the grounds and look up women having young children and invite them to bring the little ones to the rest tent so they could take a sleep while the mothers could be free to enjoy the pleasures of the day. During the afternoon the rest tent looked like a baby show in repose. A tent in which people could place lunch baskets and wraps was another convenience on the grounds. Another innovation that was highly appreciated was that no firecrackers or other explosives were allowed on the main grounds, a separate section of the grounds being given over to the boys with a marshal in charge to see to it that they did not hurt themselves or others by their carelessness.

At 10 o'clock the forenoon exercises began at the platform with a concert of half an hour by the Rogue River Band, of Grants Pass, of 24 members in dressy new uniforms. This band was only organized last year and is largely composed of boys, yet under the leadership of Prof. Stanton Rowell such progress has been made that their music was very well rendered and an enjoyable feature of the day. At 10:30 Charles Meserve, chairman of the executive committee representing the five Josephine county Granges under whose auspices the celebration was gotten up, announced the opening of the regular exercises. The singing was under the direction of H. C. Kinney, of Grants Pass, and that the audience would have the words to the various songs that were sung these were printed on backs of the programs, the latter being distributed to the audience. To add to the further effectiveness of the singing the singers were accompanied by the Grants Pass Orchestra of eight pieces under the leadership of Mr. Demaray. The orchestra also gave several fine selections during the rendering of the program and these were greatly appreciated by the audience. The invocation was given by Rev. W. B. Pepper, pastor of the M. E. Church at Wilderville, and the Declaration of Independence was read in a most effective manner by Miss Emma Loughridge, of Grants Pass. The address in the program of the forenoon was delivered by Dr. J. W. Kerr, president of the Oregon Agricultural College. Dr. Kerr devoted the principal part of his address to the fact that education had come to be in the agricultural and industrial development of the country. His address was not of the stereotyped kind heard at Fourth of July celebrations and as it covered a topic of interest to his hearers and the doctor being a public speaker of much above the average he was able to hold the close attention of the large audience. As the exercises began promptly on time Dr. Kerr was able to finish his speech before 12 o'clock instead of well toward 1 o'clock as too often Fourth of July speakers are compelled to do, and to talk to empty benches, the audience having gone to their dinner. An attractive feature of the forenoon program was a number of girls, residents of Wilderville vicinity, to represent states. They were in three groups, one dressed in red, one in white and one in blue and as they were fine appearing girls they added much to interest of the occasion.

Two hours were spent at noon by the picnickers in enjoying a social time and eating lunch from well filled baskets. The extensive grove and shady nooks by the creek side afforded delightful places for groups of friends to gather and while away the time.

The afternoon exercises opened with a concert of half an hour by the Rogue River Band that drew a large crowd about the speaker's stand. The Grants Pass orchestra then gave some fine selections that won hearty encores from the audience. The address for the afternoon program was given by J. J. Johnson, lecturer of the Oregon State Grange. The topic of Mr. Johnson's address was the Grange and he was given close attention while he explained the work of this organization, that is to the farmer a commercial club, a farmers institute and a social order all in one and which is coming to be such a powerful factor in elevating the standard of the farmers and the farms in the United States. Mr. Johnson is a forceful speaker and the many points he made will give an impetus to the Grange movement in Rogue River Valley.

Following the afternoon program sports and games were held at the athletic grounds. A game of baseball between a nine from Wilderville vicinity and a team from the vicinity of Grants Pass resulted in a score of 15 for the Grants Pass boys to 13 for the Wilderville. The game was a lively one and afforded a lot of fun to the big crowd that witnessed it. Foot races, pole vaulting and other sports completed the amusements in the athletic line. Following the afternoon program and during the evening dancing was enjoyed by many of the young people. The music was by the Grants Pass Orchestra of seven pieces and was of a higher class than usual at celebration dances, and the floor, which was 40x100 feet was in good shape. The dance was under the management of G. P. Jester and Fred Reynolds, of Grants Pass, and to their care it was due that it was a most enjoyable affair and entirely free from the objectionable features of the average public dance.
