CHAPTER II. Old Love and New.

"WELL, here I am," announced a tall, slender youth, entering the deserted salon a few minutes later with Nish at his side. "I'm here at my country's call, all right, but my confounded country doesn't seem to be on hand to meet me."

His graceful walk was not wholly steady, and there was a flush on the handsome young face. The late arrival was Prince Danilo of Marsovia, attache of the Marsovia legation at Paris. As a diplomat he had scarcely scored a success, for he had a delightfully normal aversion to work and a simple, unfeeling joy in the amusements of Maxim's and his clubs.

"I'll hunt up his excellency at once."

For a few minutes no sound was audible in the empty salon save the distant swell and fall of dance music, punctuated by the stumorous prince's heavy breathing.

Then Natalie hurried in with De Joldon. Both looked anxious.

"How careless of me!" the ambassador's wife was exclaiming. "Where can I have dropped the miserable fan? If my husband should pick it up and find on it those words you were foolish enough to write— I wonder if I left it in the niche on the stairs when we were sitting there. Let's go back and see."

They turned back, almost colliding with Sonia, who was entering, Cascada directly behind her.

"Oh, Mme. Sadova," asked Natalie, "you haven't seen anything of a white ivory fan? I've looked everywhere, and—"

"No," replied the widow; "but I'll look in this room if you haven't made a thorough search here already."

Natalie, thanking her, hurried back with her cavalier to the stairway. Sonia idly began her search, but Cascada interrupted her.

"That can wait," he pleaded, "but I cannot. Won't you hear me?"

"NEVER! NEVER! NEVER!"

"Oh, no, I don't! Men are all alike. Goodby."

As the discomfited marquis made his way wrathfully from the room Sonia mischievously crept across to the couch. There lay the man, sound asleep, his face still covered by the handkerchief. Sonia touched his hair.

"Scat!" roared Danilo, giving his head a shake that let the handkerchief fall from his face.

"Danilo!" gasped the widow, starting back.

At sound of his name the prince sat up, dazed and blinking. His wandering eyes fell on the woman, and, with an exclamation of utter amazement, he stumbled to his feet and stood staring incredulously at her.

"Sonia!" he exclaimed. "Sonia!"

Then, recovering himself, he bowed stiffly and said:

"I beg your pardon, madame."

"No; I beg yours," she replied. "Pray go on snoring."

"You don't remember me?" he asked, surprised.

"Not in the very least," she answered, moving away.

"Yet you called my name."

"You were asleep then. That was different."

"And now I am awake—to the joy of seeing you again."

"The joy is all your own. Is it so surprising to find me in Paris? I am here enjoying my wealth—and freedom."

"I congratulate you on both, especially the freedom."

"Yes, freedom is one of your fads, I believe," remarked Sonia, "especially freedom from marriage. Do you still make a habit of avoiding marriage—at the last moment?"

"Sonia, you are unjust. If it had rested with me you should be my wife now, not another man's widow."

"If it rested with you?" she mimicked. "Well, let the whole story rest now. It's forgotten."

"By you, perhaps—never by me."

"Oh, no! I remember it every now and then for my own amusement. But it is hard to think of myself as the little Marsovia peasant maid to whom the dashing cavalry officer, Prince Danilo, was once engaged and whom his rich old uncle at the last moment forbade to marry because of her poverty. How differently that same rich old uncle would look on the match to-day! Twenty millions is a prettily dowry."

"At least it seems you didn't break your heart over losing me," sneered Danilo.

"No; my plebeian heart stood the shock excellently. I soon found consolation—an elderly husband who lived just one week after the wedding and left me all his wealth."

"Yes; I heard how your father forced you into the match. Next time you can choose a husband to suit your self."

"Why should I marry again? I am rich, free. I have everything."

"Including love?" he asked, his eyes devouring her fragile beauty.

"I don't believe in love," scoffed Sonia. "All men are alike. Dozens of them are after my money and make love to me because they can't get it without me."

"Men are not all fortune hunters," he denied hotly. "I for one—"

"So they all say. Each says 'I love you!' Each means my fortune."

"They do?" cried Danilo, in rage at the strong insinuation. "Well, here's one that doesn't. I for one shall never say to you, 'I love you!'"

A strange smile stole across her face.

THE LATE ARRIVAL WAS PRINCE DANILLO.

Nish was assuring the prince. "Are you quite in condition to see him, if I may?"

"Oh, I'm all right enough," yawned Danilo, "only I forgot to go to bed last night. If I could reel off a few yards of sleep—"

"Perhaps I could find you some place to—"

"I'd prefer a desk, if you can find one. I always sleep best at my desk. But I suppose—"

"There is a couch, sir, over in the corner behind the palms. How would that do? You could get a nice nap there, and in a little while I'd find his excellency for you. But, sir, if I may say so, why do you waste your life in dissipation when you might marry and settle down? Just think, now! Would not a dear little wife and a home of your own be better worth while than all your clubs? I leave it to you if—"

"You leave it to me!" retorted Danilo. "Then I make it clubs."

"But, if I may say so—"

"You may not," interrupted Danilo, crossing to the couch and throwing himself at full length among his cushions. "By by! If you're waking, call me early!"

He spread a handkerchief over his face and in a moment was sound asleep, leaving Nish to tip-toe out in search of Popoff.

"Certainly," assented Sonia cheerfully. "You are going to propose, aren't you?"

"Ah, you read my secret!"

"It required little cleverness. You men are all alike."

"But no man ever before loved as I love!" protested Cascada, his voice unconsciously rising in his emotion. "You are all the world to me. Until I met you I never thought I could—"

"Ring off!" grumbled Danilo in his sleep, vaguely bothered by the loud voice.

Sonia started.

"Some one is here!" she whispered, pointing toward the hidden couch.

"You are mistaken," contradicted Cascada, "and even if it were so I am willing for all the world to know how I—"

A long, blissful, sonorous snore from the couch.

Sonia laughed, her eyes alight with amusement.

"Snoring and romance don't go well together, marquis," she observed, "and as the snoring doesn't seem likely to stop the romance must, you say you are in love with me, and I know you are in love with my fortune. Good-by."

"You misjudge me cruelly!" Cascada protested.

Are You Sure Your Kidneys are Well?

Many rheumatic attacks are due to uric acid in the blood. But the duty of the kidneys is to remove all uric acid from the blood. Its presence there shows the kidneys are inactive.

Don't dally with "uric acid solvents." You might go on till dooms day with them, but until you cure the kidneys you will never get well.

Doan's Kidney Pills, not only remove uric acid, but cure the kidneys and then all danger from uric acid is ended. Here is Grants Pass testimony to prove it:

Mrs. A. Lempe, F Street, Grants Pass, Ore., says: "For some time I suffered severely from rheumatic pains and at times was so stiff and lame that I could scarcely get around. At night my rest was greatly broken on account of these pains and as a consequence, I would arise in the morning feeling so stiff and lame that it was a hard thing for me to perform my household duties. I tried many remedies and liniments without receiving the slightest relief. Hearing about Doan's Kidney Pills being highly recommended for such troubles, I started taking them, procuring a box at Clemens' drug store. I was helped from the beginning and before I knew it, I was almost free from the trouble. Occasionally have a slight pain in my back, but a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills never fail to relieve me, I have told others how much good I have receive from Doan's Kidney Pills and would not be without them in the house." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cent. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, Sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Efficiency as applied to an automobile, means that ability in a car which enables it to go and come when and where you want it. It means speed, economy, endurance, hill climbing, and roadability—those things the "Tourist" won in a string of forty-two brilliant victories out of forty-five entries. Buy the car that has proved its worth by winning all manner of tests in competition with all types of cars. These contests prove conclusively the superiority of the "Tourist," the "Pacific Coast Car" over all others.

They prove positively that no car other than one built here with the sole idea of meeting Coast road and climatic conditions could have made the wonderful "Tourist" record.

There are several models of Tourist Cars to meet the various models of pocketbooks. There are several styles of 2-cylinder and 4-cylinder cars from which to choose. Better buy a Tourist than wish you had.
