SPEECH OF SENATOR GORE, THE BLIND ORATOR

Convulsing with laughter by his wit swaying their hearts by his eloquence holding their minds attentive by his reasoning, United States Senator Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma last night at the armory entertained and instructed 3,500 people of Portland for two hours and more in a discussion of political issues and remedies for political ills. He discussed the attitude of the Republican party, admitted its great mission and its great work during its early existence and deplored its departure from the principles upon which it was founded. He took up the tariff and trusts, he spoke of the bank guarantee plan and the injunction planks of the platforms. He lauded Bryan and predicted his success in November and through all the time the audience sat responsive to his moods, laughing when he willed, observant or studious by turns changing under the magic of his oratory.

It was a great meeting. Those who have contended that the cause of Bryan is dead in Oregon could not help being shocked and grieved at the wild outbursts of applause and long continued cheers which greeted the mention of Bryan's name. Nor could they fail to be concerned at the enthusiasm which greeted the doctrines of the great commoner as set out by the blind advocate.

From the time that Senator Gore took his place upon the platform and waited until the cheers had died away, until he finished his peroration, more than two hours later, he had his audience with him. He was introduced by John M. Gearin, briefly, and in beginning his address acknowledged the compliments paid him sincerely. He acknowledged the debt of Oklahoma to Oregon in that his state had followed the lead of Oregon in the enactment of the direct primary law and other reforms.

He felt that he was a neighbor to Oregon, the speaker said he was from the west and of it. In New York he had told the people that the east must come to the west for gold, opportunity and prosperity. The west must come to the east for surpluses, panics and presidents, but now the west was going to go the east: one better and give it the president.

Senator Gore said he was a friend of Portland and of Oregon, and here he paid Governor Chamberlain high compliment.

"I am a friend of Oregon," he said, "for one thing because you have selected in January will elect to the United States senate an old friend and fellow-Mississippian. Governor Chamberlain. You have risen above parti- sanship in your selection. When Senator Chamberlain takes his place in the senate there will be seven native born Mississippians there, and we will form a flying wedge and give Oregon what she wants."

Continuing, the senator paid compli- ment to the Republican voters of Ore- gon. He lauded them, for their en- actment of the direct primary, the in- itiative and referendum and other reforms.

"In Oklahoma," he said, "we fol- lowed Oregon's lead and enthroned the people by the enactment of the in- itiative and referendum. The Republican candidate came out here and fought that principle contending that it loosened the foundation stones of self government. He east his influence against the judgment of Oregon voters, and they ought to repudiate him. Taft is an enemy to self government, as the enemy of those who work with their hands.

"The Democratic party believes that the union is an indestructible union of indestructible states. It believes no union, no states; no states, no union.

The Democratic party believes in the United States of America. The Re- publican party believes in the United trusts of America.

"The trusts," he said, "rifle the cradle and rob the tomb. They tax the swaddling cloths of the infant and lay their hands upon the ceremonies of the dead. They would, if they could, put meters upon the breasts of the mother and charge the hungry infant so much per gram." He then took up the illustration of the housewife, showing that from the time she rose from her trusts-made bed in the morning until she went back tired nights she paid tribute to the trusts in every thing she used.

"But who are you going to have curb the trusts? Are you going to give them over to the Democrats for correction, who are their old enemies or give them to the Republicans, ex- pecting the parents to kill their own children?"

The protective tariff was taken up for discussion by the speaker. He contended that it was unfair for the American farmer and wage-worker to pay more for the trusts-made tools they used and the clothes they wore than the German peasants along the Rhine, and this was the result of the tariff.

"Taft says that some tariffs should be reduced, some raised. The vote- ers have a right to know before election which tariffs he would raise and which lower. The Democratic party says, put all trust-made goods on the free list." In discussing the injunction plank of the two platforms the speaker said that the Republican platform held that the injunction law should be changed, the Democratic that it should be changed and that no man should be held guilty of constructive contempt without a fair trial. He asked which party the voters would commission to make that change the Republicans whose candidate had been the father of the present practice, or the Demo- cratic party which believes that the writ of injunction should be a protection from suffering and not a sword for the destruction of the innocent.

"What is the Republican party's remedy for panics? That piebald monstrosity, the Aldrich-Vreeland bill. What is it? It is a temptation to the financial sharks to bring on a panic. It is a bribe of $5,000,000 of emergen- cy currency piled up in the vaults say- ing to these pirates bring on a panic and you get me, do not bring one and you don't."

"And what is the Democratic rem- edy for panics? What is a panic? "It is a loss of confidence. We pro- pose to enact a law in which every man will know when he puts a dollar in the bank that he will have absolute security, and that he can get that dol- lar back when he wants it.

"They say this would be unfair to the bankers. I am not in favor of any law that would be unfair to them. We ought to have the best banks in the world, and that is what the Demo- cratic party intends to have.

"I say protect both the noteholder and the depositor. That is fair and not unjust. That say it casts suspi- cion on the banks. Does not the gov- ernment force the national banks to guarantee its deposits with them? Should not the private citizen be guar- anteed against loss as well as the gov- ernment? Who is the best able to less his money the government or the wage worker? Shame on a govern- ment that would protect its own money and not protect that of its citizens."

"We have tried the system in Okla- homa, and it works well. The guaran- teed banks have increased $4,000,000 to deposits, and the banks not guaran- teed have decreased $1,000,000.

"Four banks failed and it was posted that the state would pay the depositors and the farmers were too busy to come in and get their money. There were no howling mobs there."
