

FORESTRY SERVICE GETS INDORSEMENT

At Albuquerque, New Mexico last week one of the greatest fights of the year occurred—not a real stand up and knock down affair nor were swords or pistols used—words were the only weapons, but they were hurled back and forth with all the vigor and force possible to put into them.

The occasion of all this was the meeting of the National Irrigation Congress. The struggle was between the supporters and opponents of the present government forestry policy and resulted in a sweeping victory for the friends of Chief Forester Gifford Pinchot.

With a few recommendations for change in adopted resolutions the congress adopted resolutions indorsing the forest service as well as other government bureaus concerned in the work of development and reclamation.

The report of the committee on resolutions was adopted without discussion at the close of the morning session. After that long contest before the committee, the critics of the forest service were satisfied with the following:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this congress that such legislation should be had, in justice to the Forest Service and claimants to property rights within the National forests, as will provide for a review at the instance of any party affected, by a competent tribunal of controversies relating to homestead entries, of forest control or regulation, arising from any action, regulation or ruling of the Forester's office.

That whenever large tracts of land suitable for agriculture and which are not natural forest and which are not intended to be made forest and which are not necessary or proper for the preservation of other forests or the watersheds or water supplies for the purpose to which they have been devoted, lie within forest reserve boundaries, such tracts should be restored to entry as public lands.

Another resolution is upon the utilization of streams for the purpose of electric power and favors the removal of restrictions upon such use. After recommending the construction of levees and reventments where needed, drainage works for the reclamation of swamps and overflowed lands and the general conservation of waste waters, through reforestation and other means, the resolution continues:

That a census of the standing timber in the United States should be authorized by congress, and the states should be urged to co-operate with the Nation for the preservation and enlargement of our forest resources by adoption of uniform laws, and that forestry, irrigation, drainage, flood protection, water storage and river regulation and control for navigation and water power should be regarded as one great inter-related subject in all legislative and executive policies.

That power made available by National irrigation works, when once applied by pumping or other duty connected with irrigation, should be regarded as appurtenant to the land, and urge the enactment of laws to this end.

The resolutions give sweeping indorsement to the work of the Reclamation Service, the Forest Service and Geological Survey and urge on Congress continued support and increased appropriations for all of these bureaus; urge the repeal of the timber and stone act, "to the end that the accumulation of public lands in the hands of a few great corporations may be arrested," urging that the Carey act be made applicable to the territories indorsing the movement to hold a session of the congress in Washington in 1910, to be known as the International Congress on Irrigation, and asking appropriations from the state and the federal governments for this congress; ask congress for an adequate appropriation for the use of the hydrographical division of the Geological Survey to determine by experiments and measurement and observation the practical effects of grazing and lumbering on the supply of water for irrigation and on the erosion of the soil and that such investigation extend over the various water beds, both in and out of the National forests and that such investigation be prosecuted simultaneously throughout all the states and territories of the arid and semi-arid West.

Spokane was named as the meeting place of next year's congress.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.

Their Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong and Healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. When health they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily, when unhealthy some part of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms—pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot, dry skin, rheumatism, gout, gravel, disorders of the eye sight and hearing, dizziness, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep the filters right you will have no trouble with your kidneys.

Mrs. R. M. Eperly, Fifth St. cor. Evelyn St., Grants Pass, Ore., says: "My daughter was suffering from a slight attack of kidney trouble and her health was becoming run down. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a box from Clemens' drug store and upon giving them to her, I noticed immediate relief. She is still taking them and from all indications, it will only be a short time until she is entirely free from the trouble. I gladly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to mothers who have children afflicted in the same manner." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents.
