Colored Porter Has Troubles.

Considerable excitement occurred at the depot Thursday morning on the arrival of the first section of No. 15. Several of the boys who were selling fruit at the train were enjoying themselves at the expense of one of the negro porters in the diner and were calling him "Snowball" when the colored gentleman took exception to the name and picking up a piece of coal about three inches in diameter he threw it at Peter Kenny, striking him a hard blow in the head, making an ugly cut and knocking the lad down. Before he could regain his feet the negro struck him another blow in the back with another piece of coal about six inches across.

Chief of Police McLean boarded the train to arrest the man but the porter locked the door and refused him admittance. A telegram was sent to Ashland to have the porter held there and Deputy Fish Warden Clanton, with Earl Albro and John Fallon, two boys who were witnesses to the fracas, went to Ashland on the second section of No. 15 to identify the offender.

The negro was brought to Grants Pass on No. 16 Thursday evening. The conductor was loth to part with him as he was short of help but the demands of the law must be obeyed, so he was handed over to Mr. Clanton and he will have his preliminary hearing this Friday afternoon.

SOCIAL EVENTS

A small party consisting of the Misses Evelyn Mitchell, George Coron and Mrs. Claud Davis, and Messrs. Claud Davis, William Riggs and Vernon Anderson took a Sunday outing on Rogue river making the trip by boat from Grants Pass to vicinity of Hells Gate. The boat was loaded on a wagon and the party returned via Merlin. The party had a very enjoyable time, but some enjoyed the ride overland and others took the train after reaching Merlin.

Miss Fannie Abrams entertained in a week end party Saturday evening and Sunday, Miss Ethel Birch being the guest of honor. Saturday the guests formed into a walking party and enjoyed the delightful evening strolling through the city limits. Sunday morning was spent driving and viewing the different points of interest in and around Grants Pass, and after a delicious lunch had been served and partaken of, the guests finished out the day in true Western style in horseback riding. Sunday evening was passed in strolling through the grove of oaks near the Maxwell home down the river and lounging on the banks of the beautiful lake adjoining. This form of entertainment was most gratifying to all who participated, and especially so to Miss Birch, as she, being a visitor from Philadelphia, was given an opportunity to see something of the western life and surrounding scenery, while enjoying the outdoor exercise.

Miss Hazel Williams entertained a few friends Thursday evening in a delightful little dinner party in honor of Miss Clare Kremer and Hazel Kuykendall, who are visiting friends here. Each of the young ladies present was requested to make herself a dainty bonnet before she was allowed to partake of the delicious dinner served by Mrs. Williams. They were made of tissue paper and were elaborately trimmed with large bows. These bonnets the little ladies wore when they went in a body to the home of Miss Elizabeth Davis, whom they escorted to the evening train for her departure on her vacation. Those present at the dinner party were: Misses Esther La Brie, Irene Kendall, Clare Kremer, Hazel Kuykendall, Birdie and Violet Clemen, Maude Williams, Hazel Williams and Master Carl Williams. Music and games were indulged in and all were delighted with the entertainment furnished by their hostess.

Wednesday evening of last week Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Walker gave a farewell lawn party at their home on C and Seventh street, in honor of Mrs. Walker's sister, Miss Lydia White. There were about 20 guests present and the evening passed pleasantly away with games and music. Just before luncheon was served each guest was presented with a menu card and requested to guess what the different refreshments were as named on the card. Some of the names were very misleading, and much amusement was occasioned by the guesses and the hostess. When the delicious refreshments were served, however, they were found to amply repay them for their trouble. The most enjoyable part of the evening was spent in examining the original drawings which each guest had been requested to bring. Some of these were found to be very artistic, others very humorous and all of them extremely good. Ralph Looney was declared to be the artist of the evening, he having furnished a splendid likeness of a baby's head and as a reward for his merit, he was presented with the entire collection of drawings. All present were delighted with the evening's entertainment.

A "neighborhood" picnic was held on North 10th street Tuesday evening in which all the neighbors of that section of the city were present and everyone was given an excellent opportunity to get acquainted with his next door neighbor. The time was well filled up with games and amusements of all kinds and everyone had an excellent time. Refreshments consisted of squash and pumpkin pie, the squash and pumpkins being raised in that neighborhood, and delicious watermelons from the same vicinity. These are the kinds of picnics that we need and we need lots of them. These little informal gatherings among the near neighbors have a strong influence in uniting them in true neighborly friendship and leaves no room for petty wrangling and indifferences that are so prevalent among the families of a neighborhood where all should be peace and good-will. It has been said, and too often truly, that one must go away from home to become acquainted with his next door neighbor, and very often when we meet them at a friend's house we will be surprised to find what congenial people they really are and how well we like them. Everybody get busy and have more "neighborhood" picnics and get acquainted.

Miss Susie Bannard entertained a number of friends last Friday evening in honor of her cousin, Miss Ethel Birch, of Philadelphia. The order of entertainment was something out of the usual, being a progressive contest party of five tables. The young people found their places at the tables in the following manner: Each one was presented with a picture, cut from a magazine, containing the names of the different guests and they took their places at the tables in accordance to the suggestions in the pictures. At one table was a needle threading contest, at another a button sewing contest, still another contest of stabbing peanuts from a large dish with hatpins and moulding gum into animals. These contests were a source of a vast amount of amusement. Five minutes were allowed at each table and prizes were awarded to the lady and gentleman scoring the largest number of points at the different tables. The lady's prize was won by Miss Warner, while Ed VanDyke carried off first honors among the gentlemen and Ralph Looney received an extra point for most artistic arrangement of buttons. At the end of this contest dainty refreshments were served and then a progressive story-telling contest was held which developed the fact that some very promising fictionists were among the assembled guests. Many amusing games were indulged in which made the hours pass all too quickly, making this one of the jolliest little affairs participated in by the young people of the city. Those present, besides the family, were Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Bishop, Misses Lillian and Laura Riggs, Miss Carnier, Misses Fannie Abrams, Jessie Mastin, Tulare Linkey, Christina McLean, Miss Warner, Miss Tighe; Messrs Ed VanDyke, Robert McLean, Edward McLean, Ralph Looney, Harley Stonacher, F. B. Olding.
