GRANTS PASS MAN IN A FOREIGN LAND HAS AN ENJOYABLE VACATION

Velp, Oct. 2, 1910.
Editor Courier: For the past two months we have made our home in one of the prettiest spots in the Netherlands, where we can wander in the pine woods and can climb hills, where the heather grows and blooms, giving, for a short season, much beauty to the moors, which are quite abundant in this province. The village of Velp (8000 inhabitants) is quite a lively place in July and August, when many of the residents of Amsterdam, the Hague and Rotterdam come to spend their summer vacation here and enjoy the beautiful walks and drives in this vicinity. The number of automobiles in use here is not large as compared with the United States, but I have been amazed by the number of bicycles to be seen daily in city and country, for all classes still ride, some for pleasure, some for exercise, while many wheels are used for quick delivery of various kinds of merchandise. I rented a very good bicycle for $3 a month and have enjoyed many a ride along the smooth, shady avenues that abound in this section of the country, for the roads were built centuries ago and are very well kept up, having bicycle paths at the about six of seven feet and is reached by a stairway, while over it is suspended a flat, octagonal sounding board, without which it would be very hard for the preacher to be by all, for the roof must be nearly 100 feet up. At one end of the cathedral the chancel still remains, though never used, while a great organ fills the other end. Around the space used for services the floor is literally made of flat tombstones, three feet by seven feet, for until a century ago many of the nobility and of the middle classes were buried in the cathedrals. The inscriptions and carving on the majority of these stones are illegible because of the thousands of worshippers and visitors that have walked over them. Near one wall I found a stone with coats of arms elaborately carved on it and perfect inscription, showing that father and son of an aristocrat family were buried these in 1716 and 1718. The Dutch Reformed church here still adheres to the simple service, congregational singing, prayer, 45-minute sermon and two collections. The collections are taken during the sermon, which is divided in two parts, a hymn being sung between part one and two of the sermon. As soon as the benediction was pronounced the men all put on their hats.

We spent a week in Amsterdam, Haarlem and vicinity, and as the weather man was good to us we were able to visit many interesting places. Furthermore, we had the pleasure of seeing Queen Wilhelmina and Prince Hendrik and King Albert and Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, as they drove through Amsterdam. The Belgian king and queen were entertained in Amsterdam by the Dutch queen and consort and there was much festivity on their account. One evening they had several of the Dutch warships illuminated, which was a very pretty sight and of which I managed to get a good photo. Haarlem is the center of the bulb culture and on a beautiful drive we passed several of the bulb farms. A trip by steamer from Amsterdam to the Island Morken in the Zuider Zee and returning via Volendam, Monnikendam and from there through canals to Amsterdam, was very interesting on account of the quaint costumes worn by the fisherfolk of Morken and Volendam, but so many American and English tourists have visited there that they have become show places, and at Morken, when you step ashore, girls in costume greet you with "Post cards, very nice," and while going along the streets, when they saw a Kodak they would cry "photograph, photograph," and then expect you to pay for the privilege if you took a snap shot of them.

One of our most enjoyable side trips from Haarlem was to Aekmoor, a city of 20,000 people and famous for its cheese market held there every Friday morning. Aekmoor is well worth a visit because of its quaint, old buildings and picturesque views along its busy, clean canals, but when you add to this the cheese market, where the methods of buying and selling are the same as they were centuries ago, it makes the town intensely interesting. The cheeses are of the Edam type, but not painted, so that they resemble huge oranges. The farmers bring them in Thursday afternoon and Friday morning, and arrange them in tiers, covering them with canvas till, at the stroke of 10 o'clock, the market opens. The center of attraction for visitors is at the weighing hall. Here are four immense balance scales, weight master and assistants, and four groups of off-bearers. The off-bearers are dressed in white, with flat straw hats, yellow, red, green or blue (each group its particular color) and they are the busy people. About 100 cheeses are put on a rounded tray with projecting handles at either end. Large straps go around the men's shoulders and loop over the ends of the tray handles, and it is amazing to see the speed with which two men carry their load of at least 500 pounds, for they are paid according to the amount handled, and each group tries to make the best record. They go at a pace between a shuffle and a dog trot and people who get in their way are jostled to one side without ceremony, as the off-bearers think they own the market on their busy day. After weighing, the tray of cheeses is delivered by them to the store, wagon, canal boat or train for shipment, for cheese making is one of the principal industries in the region around Aekmoor, as the official figures show that during 1908 an average of over 300,000 pounds of cheese were handled on the market there every Friday. If it's a Deere it's Right

JOHN DEERE MOLINE, ILL.

Because his made right, by a force of skilled plow experts whose equal cannot be found in any other plow factory in the world. There are many different makes of plows, each claiming to be the best, yet the fact remains that three John Deere plows are in use to one of any other kind. The John Deere Factory, the largest in the world, turns out every year more plows than any five other factories combined.

Standard of the World For Over 60 Years

The Pioneer Plow Maker, John Deere, made his first steel plow by hand from the blade of a saw in 1837. The first slab of steel rolled in the United States was rolled for the John Deere plow by William Woods, of Pittsburg, in 1846. And ever since those early days Deere Plows have shown the way and maintained the lead in this great national industry. Is it any wonder that the farmers of the world express their verdict in the familiar phrase—"If it's a Deere—It's Right."

We make over 1000 styles of plows, each as good as it can be made,—the best that brains and perfect equipment can produce. No matter what your needs may be, we can supply them from our line.
