When not sprinkling streets Mr. Wessen was to do other work for the city at the same rate. He had been laid off a number of days, however, and at a special session of the council Friday night he offered to resign if the council would pay him for straight time since he had commenced work, and also return to him the $100 cash bond which he put up when awarded the contract, his resignation to be effective unless he could be given continuous work. A special committee composed of Councilmen McLean, Caldwell and Daniels will investigate and report.
