

DEATH OF H. C. KINNEY.

tion of the best interests of the community. He was affiliated with the Masonic order, a member of Melita Commandery, Knights Templar of Grants Pass, and of Hills Temple Order of the Mystic Shrine, of Ashland.

H. C. Kinney was a lover of his home, and within the home circle he was a beloved and idolized husband and father. He was married to Miss Kate Mathews in Wyoming, Illinois, and to the union two children were born, the eldest, Marjorie, now being the wife of W. A. McCormick of Pomona, California, and the younger, Paul, residing at the family home in this city. Mrs. Kinney and both children were at the bedside when the spirit of the loved one winged its flight to the Great Beyond.

The funeral will be held Thursday, the hour yet to be announced.

Bethany Presbyterian church was filled Thursday afternoon with the mourning people of Grants Pass, gathered around the bier of the beloved friend and respected citizen, Hammond C. Kinney, who had departed this life Tuesday, January 14th.

The Knights Templar, of which order the deceased had been a member, formed an escort for the remains from the Kinney residence to the church, where the casket was banked in flowers that were tokens of the regard of personal friends and of the various civic and other organizations with which the departed had been connected.

The pall bearers were men who had been associated with Mr. Kinney during the many years he had passed in southern Oregon, those permitted to bear the casket to its final resting place being R. A. Booth of Eugene, Henry Booth of Roseburg, Warren Mee of Applegate, H. D. Norton, H. L. Gilkey and J. D. Fry of Grants Pass.

Hymns were sung by a choir composed of members from the choirs of the other church organizations other than that of which Mr. Kinney had been a member. Since the earliest days of the Bethany Presbyterian church Mr. Kinney had been one of its foremost supporters, and his voice and his leadership had always been pillars of strength to the church choir, and it was a last request that he had made of those whose voices had mingled with his in singing hymns of praise for so many years within the church that today they sit in silence, bowed with the great grief that was theirs, their places just back of the sorrowing relatives. The local Masonic organizations were also attendant in a body.

Rev. Robert H. McLean, the first pastor of the church which Mr. Kinney had assisted in organizing a quarter of a century ago, and has since closed his pastorate of the organization, preached the funeral sermon, his words carrying comfort to the hearts of the mourning assemblage. In part Mr. McLean spoke as follows:

"It is not necessary to take a text today. The life lived is the text. This great gathering of friends, the closing of the business houses, the universal sorrow, testify to the place our friend and brother held in the hearts of the people. It is worth a life of service to call forth such an expression.

"I said no text was necessary, but God in His Word has written the biography and epitaph of every man, and were I to choose for our friend I would take this for the biography. 'The path of the just is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.' And for the epitaph I would take this, 'Thine eyes shall see the king in his beauty; they shall behold the land that is very far off.' Does that not express the life, and character, and hope of him who has just entered upon its fullness?

"Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life," said the King, so I would speak of his faithfulness. From the day of the first meeting in the court house in 1877, I could count on Mr. Kinney's attendance, no matter what the weather. Coming from a business trip, whether Sunday morning or Thursday evening, if there was not time to go home he came straight to the church. No matter how heavy the pressure of business I never knew him to excuse himself from singing at funerals, or from going to help those in need. And in this he always manifested a most child-like faith, rare in a busy man of this world. I shall never forget the tender pleading at the bedside of a friend, years ago, when she was facing an operation that carried her from us. It told of an intimate acquaintance with Him who has taught us to pray.

"I want to speak, also, of his purity of life. In this age it is like a breath from heaven to meet a man whom the Lord would call 'pure in heart.' No life that ever touched his was worse for the contact. Out from the choir directed by him went those who have carried his influence to distant states, and there they sing and work for the Lord whom he served in song. His voice was on the altar of his God. Francis Ridley Havergal prayed,

"Take my voice, and let me sing Always, only, for my King, and that was his prayer as expressed in his use of his splendid gift: 'Singing for Jesus, and trying to win Many to love Him, and join in the song; Calling the weary and wandering in, Rolling the chorus of gladness along.'"

"When nearing the end, the church for which he had labored was on his heart, and he sent a message to the members expressing his gladness that he had been permitted to labor with them in building up this work for his Lord and Master Jesus. He was a man of large affairs, yet the Kingdom had the first place in his heart. And that prepared him to meet God's messenger, sent to call him home, with a smile.

"They tell me that the night before he entered into the fuller life that he was back again with the choir and was leading them in song.

"Some said that as he was approaching the shore to embark his mind was wandering. Was it so? Was he not already listening to the voices on the other shore? We are told that the fisher folk of Brittany when the fog is on the sea will go down to the shore, and wives and children will sing, sending their voices out into the mists to guide the husbands and fathers to safety. Did not our brother hear the voices of the 'Angels of Jesus' and of loved ones gone before singing to welcome him home? When the fishermen caught the voices of welcome they took up the song in response, and so they came to their rest on the wings of that song.

"And so on the wings of song he entered that land that seems to us very far off, and now, 'in nobler, sweeter song he sings that power to save.'"

"And there is no sorrowful strain in that nightless land where the leaves of the trees are for the healing of the nations.

"And now he sees the king in his beauty, and now he is like him, for he sees him as he is. The path that he has traced is the path the Master trod, the path that leads to glory and to God. And, after all, that is the only thing worth while in this life of ours, the only thing we will want when the end comes. 'Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord.'"

The remains were followed to the I. O. O. F. cemetery by a great concourse of our people, and there all that was mortal of Hammond C. Kinney was consigned to the earth from whence it came, the burial ceremonies being performed by his Masonic brothers.

MAY DISQUALIFY P. M. S. IN MAIN LEGISLATURE.

AUGUSTA, Maine, Jan. 15.—Probability of the democrats electing a United States senator from Maine is seen by democratic leaders here today in the election of three republican postmasters to the legislature while still holding office. When the democratic legislators objected to the three men participating in the vote for senator on the ground that their postmasterships barred them from election, the latter wired their resignations to Postmaster General Hitchcock and they were not accepted until today. If the three republican legislators are barred, it will give the democrats a majority on joint ballot.

COINCIDENCE OF TWO DEATHS.

SEATTLE, Jan. 17.—Ex-Mayor Hiram C. Gill and his wife are each mourning the death of mother today following the deaths of Mrs. Minnie A. Keene and Mrs. Martha C. Gill of this city. Mrs. Keene, who was the mother of Mrs. Gill died 12 hours after the death of Mrs. Gill. Both had been close friends since they came here from Madison, Wis., on the same train 22 years ago. It was on this trip that the romance of the former mayor and his wife began.

SENATE FINDS ARCHBOLD GUILTY ON 5 COUNTS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The ermine was torn from the shoulders of Judge Robert W. Archbold of the commerce court here today when he was convicted by the United States senate of "misbehavior and misdemeanor in office."

The jurist was found guilty of five of 13 articles with which he was charged—the first, third, fourth, fifth and thirteenth.

After voting continuously for three hours, the senate went into executive session to decide whether Archbold shall be forever debarred from any other federal office or merely from his present position.

Conviction on any one of the 13 counts carried with it a penalty of removal from the bench.

The highest vote in favor of Archbold came on article 10 when every senator voted for acquittal except Senator Ashurst of Arizona.

While the voting was in progress, Judge Archbold and Mrs. Archbold were sequestered in a committee room, the house sergeant-at-arms shielding them from a curious crowd which filled the corridors. The only break in their seclusion was when a page appeared with the result of each vote.

No comment was forthcoming from the accused jurist as he read each strip of paper which he handed to Mrs. Archbold after perusal.

During the balloting from the sixth to the twelfth articles on which was acquitted, the progressive members generally voted guilty. Senator Root voted guilty on the first six articles and then changed his vote to not guilty. Senator Works voted for acquittal on all the ballots from the seventh to eleventh.

Sensors Bourne, Bristow, Brown, Dixon, Clapp, Gronn, Kenyon, LaFollette and Poindexter voted guilty on article eight which charged that Archbold attempted to have a $500 note discounted by C. G. Boland and W. P. Boland, litigants in his court.

Article 10 in which all the senators voted for acquittal except Ashurst charged that Archbold accepted a trip to Europe at the expense of Henry W. Cannon of New York, a director of several railroads. Archbold's defense contended that Cannon was Mrs. Archbold's cousin and that the trip was an ordinary family courtesy.

The tedium of the voting after the 8th article caused several senators to absent themselves. Only 62 senators voted on the ninth article compared to 73 on the first article.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Robert W. Archbold, associate justice of the commerce court, charged with misconduct in office, was today found guilty by the senate, sitting as an impeachment court, on the first article of the 13 charges pending against him. The vote stood 68 for conviction to 5 against.

The first article charged Archbold with having willfully and unlawfully taken advantage of his position as a judge of the commerce court to induce officials of the Erie railroad and the Hillside Coal & Iron company, a subsidiary of the Erie company, to sell to himself and his partners an interest in the Katydid culm dump. At that time the Erie railroad was a litigant in Judge Archbold's court.

Acquitted on Second Article.

Archbold was acquitted of the charges in the second article, the vote standing 45 to 26. Forty-eight votes were necessary to convict.

Archbold was found guilty as charged on the third article by a vote of 60 to 11.

The senators who voted to acquit on the first article were Burnham, of New Hampshire, Catron of New Mexico, Oliver and Penrose of Pennsylvania and Paynter of Kentucky.

Those senators who voted to convict on the first article:

- Ashurst, Bankhead, Borah, Bourne, Braudagee, Bristow, Brown, Bryan, Burton, Chamberlain, Clapp, Clarke of Wyo., Clark of Ark., Crane, Crawford, Cullerson, Cullom, Cummins, Curtis, Dixon, DuPont, Fletcher, Foster, Gallinger, Gore, Gronn, Hitchcock, Johnson, Jones, Kenyon, LaFollette, Lippitt, Lodge, McCumber, McLean, Martin, Martine, Myers, Nelson, Newland, O'Gorman, Owen, Perkins, Perky, Poindexter, Pomerene, Reed, Richardson, Root, Sanders, Shiveley, Simmons, Smith of Ariz., Smith of Georgia, Smith of Maryland, Spoot, Stephenson, Stone, Swanson, Thornton, Tillman, Townsend, Warren, Wetmore, Williams, Works, Paze and Sutherland.

Senator Heiskell of Ark., and Johnston of Texas were excused from voting because they did not hear the evidence.

Senators Overman, Kern, Johnston of Ala., Briggs, Fall, Smith of Mich., Dillingham, Tillman, Jackson of Maryland and Clark of Ark., were absent.

Archbold was also convicted on the fourth article, the vote standing 52 to 29.

The senate adopted a rule providing the formal question after the reading of each charge as follows:

"Senator, how say you, is this respondent, Robert W. Archbold, guilty or not guilty upon this article?"

The voting on the first article began at 1:14 o'clock. Following the usual formalities, the clerk of the senate read the charges contained in article 1. The accused jurist's son, Robert W. Archbold, Jr., sat with folded arms and bowed head as the senators voted on the first article.

MURPHY ITEMS.

Clinton Cook, one of Applegate's enterprising farmers was a business visitor in Grants Pass for a couple of days this week.

Jack Vincent of Missouri Flat was transacting business at Murphy Wednesday.

We are still having some winter weather and the mountains have a very beautiful coat of snow on them at present.

Since the hog law has gone into effect the hogs that were so numerous around here have all hid, as none are in sight and the farmers do not seem to have any put up.

We are sorry to hear of the death of H. C. Kinney, as it is the passing of one more of our great men, one who has always been ready to help with anything that was for the good of Josephine county, and he will be long in the thoughts of the men who had to labor for day's wages in the 90's when times were hard and his industries were about the only ones that kept at work through those times.

Should they find oil at Three Pines it will be the starter of something new in Josephine county which will make the people who live far away from here wonder what is the matter with this country. By being able to have the goods to show to the people they will take all kinds of interest in our welfare and lots of them will invest in property which will add to our population. The building of the Pacific-Interior R. R., the finding of oil and the trip to Marble Caves by the Mazamas will all be of interest to the people outside of this country and will cause many families to come to southern Oregon in the next year or two, and Grants Pass will be the place to get off of the train for all of these wonders.

WHITE WYANDOTTES SCORE HIGH AT HEN SHOW.

Judging of the poultry at the Josephine County Show will be completed today, and before morning the ribbons will be hung and the public can see what manner of fowl it takes to win the honors.

Judge Hinds shows that he is a master hand at telling the good of the bad points of the various breeds of the feathered beauties, and some that were thought winners by their owners are relegated to the chicken scrap heap by a feather or a deformity that brought the one word "disqualified" from the umpire.

But the judge says that he finds some fowls classy enough to win in any company here. He was especially pleased with the showing of White Wyandottes, while the White Orpingtons, which have the honors so far as numbers go, crowd the former also for quality. Judging in these two classes has already been completed.

The White Wyandotte exhibit of John H. Puhler of Talent holds the place of honor in the show so far as the judging has gone, his pen of that breed scoring remarkably high, the cock getting a mark of 94 points, while two of the pullets have 94 3-4 each, the highest yet scored in the show. Will Scoville and Wm. Steffen also have fine birds in this class, and are winning their share of the prizes.

Among the outside exhibitors of White Orpingtons, J. Herman Harrison of Medford has some fine stock, winning first with a handsome cock bird, though local exhibitors are beating him in many of the other Orpington classes. Dr. Wilcox has a remarkable showing of Orpingtons, his first and second pullets, which scored 92 each, attracting much attention. How good these birds are is proven by the fact that he was offered $50 each for them the first day of the show.

Thursday will be the best day for spectators as the ribbons and score cards will be up and the defects of each bird will be plainly noted by the markings on the card.

AMUSEMENTS

Oscar Hammerstein, the international impresario, who has confined his operatic ventures to grand opera with the exception of "Naughty Marietta," a comic opera by Victor Herbert and Rida Johnson Young, announces that he will present his new star Florence Webber and sixty vocalists assembled from his grand opera forces in "Naughty Marietta," in this city. A production of exceptional beauty and a gorgeous satirical equipment, together with an orchestra carried by the company to assist in its twenty song hits, will make the opera fully as attractive as during the six months' run at the Manhattan opera house in New York City, during which time capacity business was the rule. "Naughty Marietta" will fill expectations, no matter how great they may be for Mr. Hammerstein has provided Miss Webber with a supporting company and a production as complete as any now appearing in light opera. With its wealth of detail "Naughty Marietta" comes to Grants Pass on Wednesday, January 22.
