LEARNING JIJUTSU.

One Lesson is to be Strangled and Then Resuscitated.

Mastery of the art of jujitsu requires a drilling such as no boxer, fencer, runner or rower would need to undertake. The mind must permeate the entire body from the head to the extremities, and to this end the body must first be brought under absolute control. The pupil is lured to the two extremes of heat and cold, and the virtue of perseverance is cultivated by special exercises for the summer and special exercises for the winter, says the author of "The Fighting Spirit of Japan." For the former the hottest month of the year, August, and the hottest time of the day, from 1 p. m. on, are chosen, and for the latter, commencing in January, the pupils start wrestling at 4 in the morning and keep it up until 7 or 8.

Two great competitions are held in the year, and in these historic contests "It is quite a common thing for 400 couples to participate." "Speaking from long personal experience," says Mr. Harrison, "I can state that the 'shobu' is a genuine mental as well as physical ordeal for the participant. In the case of the more advanced students, who come on at a later hour, there is all the horror of anticipation to be contended against. As one enters the building the only sounds to greet the ear are the dull and sickening thuds which proclaim successive falls, the deep breathing and panting of the contestants and the staccato tones of the umpires as they declare victory or defeat."

For the student who wins his bout and continues his progress until he passes as a pupil teacher there is another test of courage and endurance. He must be strangled and resuscitated. "The idea at the bottom of this seemingly cold blooded procedure is both to steel the victim's nerves and round off his experience, as it were, and to afford the newly promoted members an opportunity of putting into practice certain forms of 'knapper' the system of resuscitation, which are demonstrated by an expert teacher before strangulation takes place."

PITCHER FLAHERTY'S QUICK DELIVERY PUZZLED MANY.

Rabbit Robinson tells a story on Pat Flaherty's quick delivery. "Fred Hostetter was at the bat," said Rabbit, "and Flaherty was pitching. You know Pat has a famous quick delivery, and Hostetter was nearly crazed when Pat slipped three over the plate before Fred could get his bat off his shoulder. Pat was so quick with the knockout that the boy on the score board couldn't hang up but one strike, and when Hostetter went to the bench some one called his attention to the fact that there was but one strike on him. Well, Fred was sore about striking out anyhow, and when he saw but one strike on the board he went back and tried to argue with the umpire. The result of his argument was just the same as all foolish arguments, and Fred was promptly chased from the game."

BIG PRICE FOR KONETCHY.

Pittsburgh Club Said to Be Willing to Give $25,000 For St. Louis Player.

Baseball players come high, especially those who have become famous. It is said on good authority that the Pittsburgh club recently offered $25,000 and two players to the St. Louis team for big Ed Konetchy, the Cardinals' star first sacker. During the winter months

CHARACTER STUDY OF ED KONETCHY

The Pittsburgh club tried hard to land Konetchy, but the deal did not go through.

The Pirates have a fine chance to cop the bunting in the National league this season. With Koney on the initial station Pittsburgh would be almost assured of the flag Miller, who is holding down the bag, is only fair. With a star like the St. Louis boy on first base the Pirates would be greatly strengthened. Konetchy is considered one of the best men that ever held down the bag. Besides being a great first sacker he is a fine bunter.

AN ARCHITECTURAL MARVEL.

St. Sophia and its Wonderful Dome That is Said to Be Doomed.

The world would mourn were the great dome of St. Sophia to fall. There are persistent reports that the structure is in danger, that the masonry is rotten and crumbling and that the final doom of the edifice is not far off. "When it is remembered that St. Sophia was built in the sixth century that it has for more than thirteen centuries withstood the vicissitudes of fires, earthquakes, sackings and bombardments, rain and wind, heat and cold, the marvel is that it has endured so long having stood through all these ages, there will be the keenest regret if it finally yields to the destructive forces of nature."

St. Sophia is often spoken of as the grandest monument of Christian architecture. It is the perfection of the Byzantine style, differing from the early Romanesque and late renaissance of western Europe and the beautiful Gothic which must be considered the ideal of ecclesiastical architecture. It may not be as impressive as other great edifices built from five to ten centuries later, but its strength, solidity and grandeur, together with its great antiquity, give it a place unique among churches.

The collapse of St. Sophia's dome would be a greater loss than was the fall of the Venetian campanile, and its reconstruction would be utterly impossible. The problems of its building were so intricate and complex that the secret of them died with the architect Anthemius in the sixth century. It has been said that St. Sophia, "like Karnak, in Egypt, or the Athenian Parthenon, is one of the four great pinnacles of architecture; but, unlike them, it is no ruin, nor does it belong to a past world of constructive ideas, although it precedes by 700 years the fourth culmination of the building art in Chartres, Amiens or Bourges and thus must ever stand as the supreme monument of the Christian cycle."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ONE DAY'S WORK.

That is All There is Before You, So Do It to Perfection.

You have a hard thing to do. So hard it is that your breath comes short when you think of it, and your heart sinks down and becomes a bottomless pit of despondency.

If you let it go on sinking down and down you are done for, so stop it! Climb up again and look around.

You underestimate your own courage if you tell yourself you cannot accomplish this task which looms before you.

Men have done great things before now—things which make one gasp at the splendor and glory of human achievement. Do you think their hearts never faltered; that they never looked forward with utter weariness to the heights they must climb and the seas they must cross and the years they must wait before success crowns them?

How did they manage it?

The secret is simple. Through the eyes of imagination they pictured their distant goal as close to them; they saw it only one day ahead. Then they did one day's work—cheerfully, hopefully. And still the goal was one day distant—only one day—and, in fact, it had been brought one day nearer.

Sometimes through weariness or discouragement the goal vanished from sight, but the acquired habit of plodding on steadfastly, step by step, one day at a time, from hour to hour, brought them close to it in spite of themselves. And so, necessarily, at last they "arrived."

For tasks in hours of insight willed can be through hours of gloom fulfilled. Never were truer words spoken.

Let us make the most of our "hours of insight," never thinking of the visions we see in them as delusive dreams and impossible ideals. London Express.

Helping the Bride.

When Mrs. Blank, who had always lived near the coast, was married she went to live in a small inland town.

Shortly after her arrival she called on her butcher and ordered a quart of scallops.

"Why, Mrs. Blank," said the dealer, "I guess you will find those at the dressmaker's. And," he added kindly, remembering that she was a bride, "I think they're sold by the yard."—Lippincott's

The Neighborhood Traveler.

It is written, and the world believes it, that travel is the infallible, exclusive cure for provincialism. Perhaps! Ultimately that depends on what the man takes with him in his wanderings. Merely to go accomplishes naught. In fine, one need not travel at all. If the man with the common eye will but use his eyes he may bring all the world to him. The Alps and the Rockies are worth seeing, indeed, but the man who is capable of really seeing them, if among them, is capable also of beholding landscape and glory in his own neighborhood.—Booklovers' Magazine.

Slightly Inconsistent.

"A patriot should not be concerned with matters of mere pecuniary compensation."

"And yet," replied Senator Sorghum, "when a man is rich enough to be independent of such considerations, they won't let him run for office."—Washington Star

Profane Golf.

"Do you think golf a suitable game for women?"

"I should say not. Why, I saw a man playing once, and all he did" was to walk around a field with a club in his hand and stop every few minutes to swear."—Buffalo Express
