

—FLAG DAY—

Where Do Flags Come From? Uncle Sam Stitches His Own

THE stars and stripes that fly from Army outposts and buildings everywhere on Flag Day, June 14, are all manufactured by the United States Army Quartermaster Corps in Philadelphia, Pa. All bunting, regimental colors and standards are manufactured there. Right: Two seamstresses cut out the stars for official bunting flags to be sent to Army posts.

Next step in the manufacturing is the joining together of the stripes. After the 13 stripes have been gathered, it is sent to a second department, where the stars are sewed on. This completes the manufacturing process. Finished flags are then sent to be inspected and packed.

Each flag undergoes rigid examination by an experienced inspector. Some of the colors are valued up to $500, and should there be any fault the flag is returned to the sewing room. Inspection passed, it is sent to its final destination, the United States Army.

Woman Finds Rattler In Pet Rabbit Pen

By Mrs. Jim Coffey

On Sunday, May 28th about 12 o'clock I heard a racket two bantam hens were making. On going out to see what scared them I heard a rattlesnake in the woodshed so I began stepping high. I soon found it in my daughter Jean's rabbit hutch between two young rabbits, cailed and rattling to beat the band. Soon as the farthest rabbit saw me it hopped toward me and Mr. Snake struck it in the head. I ran back to the house for a shovel and when I got back the snake was coming out, so I used the shovel on it.

The rattler was two an one-half feet long and had eight rattles and a button. Mr. Coffey came by that time and he had to kill the two rabbits as both had been bitten.

If a yellow jacket stings a person that has been feeding on a rattler it is sure death, so burn or bury all rattlers that you kill.
