Safe Driving Must Be Efficient Driving

In attention and speed are often the true causes of accidents which drivers attempt to explain by saying, "I didn't see the other car (or the pedestrian) in time to stop," declared Secretary of State Earl Snell in a recent discussion of the traffic safety problem.

"Safe driving," explained Snell, "must be efficient driving, and the first rule of efficient driving is constant attention to every sign, movement and circumstance within the driver's range of vision."

The drivers who explain that they did not see the object in time to stop before striking it are telling the truth, but before such statements can be accepted as satisfactory explanations it is necessary to go a step further and determine WHY the driver did not see the object in time to stop safely.

This second step in the investigation will, in almost all cases, bring out the fact that the driver was not paying attention to the circumstances under which he was driving or he was traveling too fast for existing conditions.

Even though evidence indicates that the driver swerved his car and applied his brakes in a frantic effort to avoid the collision the unpleasant fact that he was going too fast to stop remains self-evident.

The high percentage of serious accidents on the streets and highways during hours of darkness is traceable to the tendency of drivers to travel faster than driving conditions justify. When a driver fails to adjust his speed to permit a safe stop within the distance clearly illuminated by the headlights of his car he is failing to keep the car under safe control. The sudden appearance of an object on the street, highway ahead places the driver among those who "didn't see it in time to stop."

Efficient driving makes it necessary for the driver to be prepared to stop at any time within the distance he knows to be clear ahead of his car.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Schumacher and Paul Hein returned to Cave Junction last Wednesday from Twin Falls, Idaho. On their way back to the valley they stopped in Portland and Camas, Washington, where they visited with Mrs. Hein and her parents for a few days. They expect to remain for a week or more. Mr. Schumacher and Mr. Hein have their eyes on a store at Twin Falls, Idaho, but it will take a little time to make the deal they want, so in the meantime they returned to their old home to visit for a few days.

The state electrical inspector made a visit through the valley Wednesday, and inspected the lighting system at the Rainbow Gardens, found them in good condition.

ELECTRIC COOKING
COSTS ONLY 1/2 THAT MUCH!
And It's CLEAN • COOL CONVENIENT • ECONOMICAL
In warm, summer weather an electric range is a necessity in YOUR kitchen! It's CLEAN—no soot, ashes and grime, no scouring of pots and pans! COOL, too! Electric cooking ends the drudgery of preparing meals in an overheated, unhealthy kitchen. CONVENIENT in every way—instant heat exactly where you want it at the turn of a switch; automatic cooking, too, gives added hours of leisure. ECONOMICAL? Certainly! Only half as much as you'd guess it would cost!
