Josephine Dairymen Are Praised

Dairymen of Josephine county would have reached around and patted themselves on the back if they could have been in the office of A. W. Metzger, chief of the state department of agriculture division of foods and dairies, the other day when he opened the reports of C. R. Jester, district inspector with headquarters at Grants Pass. The division chief literally shout ed praises as he found an even score of dairies with way better than the minimum bacteria count

Grants Pass last Tuesday.

"I've known the Grants Pass and Josephine county area was a good one from the standpoint of live dairymen, but these reports beat anything I've seen. Grants Pass and surrounding farm country are today one of the best spots in the state so far as quality milk and cream go," Metzger commented.

One dairy ran as low as 300 bacterial count per cubic centimeter and the unbelievably high number of 20 dairies were way, way above the minimum provided by law.

It is not the general policy of the department to name names, but the showing is so fine in this section that Metzger released these names of the dairies with such excellent records: Gats Riverview dairy, Martin's Modern dairy, Grover's dairy, Truman Donaldson,

Earl C. Rinehart, M. E. Meade dairy, George Morasch dairy, W. A. Johnson dairy, Earl Davidson dairy, E. E. Wilkins dairy, R. M. Terry dairy, Ben Nelson dairy, J. E. Olsen dairy, P. G. Stewart dairy, Candling Lone Oak dairy, McFadden's dairy, Pollork's Green Mountain dairy, M. L. Flood's Mt. View dairy, Nelson's Cloverlawn dairy and Redwoods dairy.

Metzger complimented Jester upon the showing of this area and also the dairymen whose interest in quality improvement shows thru the report.
