RECREATION HELD VITAL TO NATION AS NERVE "TONIC"

Recreation to calm jittery nerves created by the present war situation needs special attention these days, says Miss Izola Jensen, extension specialist in community social organization at Oregon State college. In her work throughout the state Miss Jensen is stressing the value of active recreation which requires "doing", as a means of relieving the tensions brought on by everyday news of destruction and terror, and ruthless murder unloosed upon helpless people.

"To combat the strain of tension and worry man needs activity," says Miss Jensen. "Big muscle activity which is experienced in hiking or taking part in the revived square dances help to relax tensions and quiet nerves. To keep a mental balance a person needs to develop a physical reserve.

"We in America need a morale-building recreation. We need to make use of the quiet and strength of the great outdoors, enjoy the beauties of nature, know the charm of music, and gain the poise and confidence that comes through creating a piece of craft with our hands."

Miss Jensen warns against the idea that recreation may be ignored in the face of the grim demands of national defense. On the contrary, she says, it will actually aid in the defense preparation, as it will keep men and women in condition to do their best work.

"The young men of our nation today are wondering what is to happen to them," Miss Jensen adds. "Mothers are fearful of what might become of their sons and families are being torn apart. It is well to recall that recreation was originally a part of religion. One's memory of this could be refreshed by reading Matthew 4:4, which begins 'Man cannot live by bread alone!'"

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wilmet of the Bonanza Cinnabar mine at Sutherlin, Oregon, and Mr. Ferguson of Portland were Sunday visitors at the David L. Webb home in Kerby.
