

MICKEY ROONEY AND JUDY GARLAND COMING SATURDAY, SUNDAY

It's "Goodbye to Carvel and on to New York" for Andy Hardy when he decides to carve out a career for himself without his dad's help in the newest of the Hardy hits, "Life Begins for Andy Hardy," coming to the Cave City theater, Saturday and Sunday, January 17 and 18. The resultant adventures in the big city provide the most thrills and laughs of any Hardy picture to date. Judy Garland returns to the Hardy fold in the new hit and, of course, Lewis Stone, Fay Holden and Ann Rutherford are also present.

"I have your letter of the 3rd instant regarding a prospective stockpile locations.

"So far as Metals Reserve Company is concerned you are working at the matter from the wrong end. Any contracts that we may make for domestic ores will require that the seller of the ore deliver into cars at the railroad station most convenient for him.

"Where we will locate our stockpile is highly dependable upon the rail point or points at which the seller loads his ore into cars. Freight charges to our stockpiles are for our account. Until the contracts begin to come in and the sellers are ready to ship, giving us due notice under their contract provision, we will not advise them as to our stockpile location.

"We will not set up a great number of local stockpiles but intend to centralize, offsetting against freight costs the savings from centralized sampling, etc.

"With all due courtesy, we want to advise you firmly that this is not a matter which can be handled in any other way than the one stated above."

NAVY RECRUITS KEEP COMING

The old year really roared out like a lion at the Navy Recruiting Station in Portland, headquarters for recruiting activities in Oregon, eastern Washington and northern Idaho.

Recruiters have been on the job 24 hours daily since December 7th, and state that the response to the navy's call for men has been a veritable stampede.

That the unceasing vigil of the recruiting personnel has paid dividends is attested to by the fact that this district leads the entire nation in enlistments per 100,000 of population.

The month of December saw a total of 1388 men joining the navy in Portland, the largest number in the history of the station. During the month a total of 2535 men were examined by the medical department of the station. Only 623 were rejected for physical reasons, mostly because of faulty teeth and vision.

A mathematically minded recruiter figured out that the months recruiting activity gave the navy a total of 106.77 tons of young Oregon manhood, the average weight being 153.85 pounds. If laid end to end the men would stretch a distance of 1 1/2 miles. The average height was 68.41 inches.

The single week of December 27th to January 2nd saw the acceptance of 556 apprentice seamen, 35 men in more advanced rates in the reserve, 6 re-enlistments and 9 men entered Class V-5 as candidates for Flying Cadet.

The files of the Recruiting Station still contain the names of over 500 men who are yet to be enlisted, and the numbers of new applicants have not diminished to any appreciable degree.

The largest single day's enlistment to date was on Sunday, December 27, when 113 men were inducted.

Lieutenant G. F. DeGrave, officer in charge of the Recruiting Station, pointed out that the navy has thrown open the gates for juniors and seniors to enlist in the reserve until their education is finished, then go into training as deck officers, as well as making it possible for sophomores to finish this current year before going into training as flying cadets.

He expressed confidence that the Oregon district would hold its position as the nation's most productive navy recruiting center throughout the year.
