

Oregon Seed Vital Factor In Defense

Oregon seed growers are making an important contribution to the nation's wartime production program, 350 delegates from 26 counties were told by department of agricultural officials at the first annual convention of the Oregon Seed Growers league at Corvallis.

Especially important, they were told, is the production of cover crop seeds — winter legumes and ryegrass — which are badly needed in the south to make up for the shortage of nitrate fertilizers. Southern farmers must have those seeds to "grow" nitrogen for their soils, so that farm families can produce more of their own foods and more of the commodities needed in the food-for-victory program, the convention was told by E. L. Deal of Washington, D. C., representing AAA's southern division.

The AAA is prepared to take all of the production from the 430,000 acres of cover crop seeds Oregon farmers reported in the recent farm defense plan canvass they were planting for 1942 harvest. Deal assured the growers that there was more chance of not having enough seed to supply the needs of the south, than of having too much. The long-time goal in the south calls for cover crops on 13,000,000 acres, he said.

Growers can assure themselves of a continuing demand for Oregon cover crop seeds in the southern states by making a large supply of seed available to southern farmers this year through AAA's conservation materials program, Deal told the convention. The AAA can obtain maximum distribution and continue to develop the use of cover crops in new areas, he explained.

C. E. Carter, another USDA representative from Washington, D. C., told the growers that he knows from personal experience that in no other place in the United States can be found the favorable combination of soil, climate and farmers ready and able to produce seed such as Oregon is

4-H Clubs Launch New 7-Point Victory Program

Oregon 4-H clubs are undertaking a seven-point victory program based on civilian defense needs, H. C. Seymour, state club leader in the O. S. C. extension service, has just announced. The program is a wartime revision of a similar one which the 25,000 Oregon 4-H club members and the 3000 local club leaders have been conducting for more than a year.

The seven points are (1) interpreting to the community the four freedoms; (2) producing and conserving needed foods in 4-H club projects; (3) saving for victory—prevention of waste; (4) developing individual and community health; (5) learning useful skills and volunteering for civilian defense work; (6) practicing democratic procedure, and (7) participating in discussion groups and other organized community activities.

Miners Get Assurance

It passed original resolutions asking the RFC to make loans on ore in dumps without requiring mortgages on the mines themselves and suggesting federation of five mining organizations represented at conference. After hearing testimony by Joseph Schulein of Oregon State college that the government was playing a "dog in the manger" role and actually reducing production of chromite, the conference voted a resolution asking the government to lift restrictions on all ore which it is unwilling to purchase itself.

Schulein said the government refuses to buy chromite below 40 per cent grade, yet has driven private buyers out of the field for lower grades by its rules appropriating and allocating supplies of all grades owned by private companies.

Schulein reported that in the last war chrome of grade as low as 27 per cent was purchased.

"Citizen Kane" Coming Saturday and Sunday to Local Theater

An exceptionally brilliant parade of motion picture productions has been set for showing in the Cave City theater, Saturday and Sunday, February 7 and 8 with "Citizen Kane", the much talked-about film starring Orson Wells, written by Orson Wells, directed by Orson Wells and produced by Orson Wells.

As the title implies, the film deals with the career of an American citizen, one Charles Foster Kane, a man obsessed by a lust for power over life, money and love. The fate of many people, his own large fortune, and the hearts of two beautiful women are the objects of his conquest in the story, which is filled with a wealth of exciting incidents. Through a radically new technique of story telling, the brilliant and often clashing characterizations of Kane himself are seen through the different eyes of those who knew him, loved him, hated him during his years of creating a vast, one-man empire.

Welles tackled a difficult job in bringing to the screen a complete portrait of a colorful personage. But by figuratively circling around and around the central character of Kane, each time revealing a new aspect of the man and his ideas and ideals, Welles presents a clear cut picture of the impulsive, ruthless, charming, capricious individual he has chosen to describe. The result is rated a cinematic triumph, especially in the portrayal of Kane's relations with his two wives, both of whom love him, and both of whom left him because he would not surrender to love except on his own terms.
