Dear Ed:
There are times of late that I just yet plumb discouraged and feel like discontinuing these letters. I was 77 years old last Friday, June 9th, the time of life when one is subject to aches and pains, I suppose. This spring is the first time I ever summoned a doctor or took medicine, and you know that one who is writing for publication should have his mind on what he is writing and not on his aches and pains. Try to write when you are feeling miserable and you will know what I mean. There have been so many told me that they liked what I wrote, said for me to write more often. It is because of that that I have written as much as I have, and so I have written many times when I was physically and mentally unfit for the task. In writing these letters I must operate a typewriter, compose, spell and punctuate and it is no easy task, especially when feeling bum. In my last letter, prior to this one, I tried to write a fitting testimonial to a departed friend, a fine neighbor and a fine man. I used two words wrongly that has greatly humiliated me.

The reason I have written in the foregoing strain is, if I am to continue these letters, that those who read them will try to glean the substance and disregard the form. It is my desire to drop a word, now and then, that will benefit the Illinois valley, if it's possible. PHIL.

of Representatives and the Senate, shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the President of the United States; . . . ."

Apparently, therefore, the Congress cannot, under the Constitution, enact a law to meet the situation after the 20th of January, 1945, for the reason that a bill cannot become a law until it has been submitted to the President, and there would be no President, his term having expired January 20th.

tion after the 20th of January, 1945, for the reason that a bill cannot become a law until it has been submitted to the President, and there would be no President, his term having expired January 20th.

Obviously, there is small likelihood of this situation developing, but due to the shortness of time between the convening of Congress on January 3rd and the expiration of the term of the President and Vice President on January 20th, it does seem to be a possibility, however remote.
