THE ONE WHO DARES

Your goal is not reached By wistful thinking By envy and hate or Duty shrinking. The one that can keep Ahead in the race Is the one who dares To set the pace. Laurels are not won By just daytime dreaming, Nor victories decided Without planning and scheming. If you hope to aspire To a place worthwhile You will have to traverse A long weary mile. You have a duty in life Be you rich or poor. A niche to fill you may Be sure How you fill it is decided by you, Whether plod with the many Or achieve with the few. Duty may be a hard master, Exacting perhaps, As you meet many obstacles And great handicaps. But to him who surmounts Them and stays in the lead, Is indeed a great victor, He's the fellow we need. —L. RUNYAN.
