Style with Thrift For War Bonds

A slimming style you can make yourself is this deep green wool sheath which fastens down the front with matching novelty buttons. A peppermint stripe dickey ties into a soft bow at the neckline. Three-quarter sleeves and fan-shaped darts at the waistline accentuate the slim lines of this pattern. Contrasting pill-box and shoulder bag are made of felt. Girls who make their own clothes bring us nearer to victory by putting their sewing-savings into War Bonds. Patterns for dress and accessories can be purchased at local pattern counters. U. S. OFF IN A CORNER WITH PHIL SNORT

Dear Ed:

According to what some folks say I am not treating them just right by not saying a few words in The News. My doctor tells me that I must live a quiet life and I don't know when I make more use- less noise than when I write. Most everybody knows that I have been feeling bum for nearly two years, and, you know, a guy can't write intelligently when the old body haint ticking just right.

I have some mighty good friends whom I owe letters and wonder why I am neglecting them. Neither my good Mrs. or me are in no condition to do much writing, and as some of our distant friends get the Illinois Valley News I am using it to get word to them. I have some very good friends down at Eldridge, Calif., and am terribly ashamed for not writing them. And there is my good friend, Col. A. A. Whitesell, somewhere in Newfoundland, who never fails to send me greetings and good wishes. His last letter was not only to me but to all his friends in this valley. I turned the letter over to the Illinois Valley News and they will print it, either whole or in part as soon as space will permit. The Colonel's letter, is quite lengthy, but it tells lots about Newfoundland that I never knew, and I am sure that many others will be glad to glean the knowledge I did. Long live the Colonel and his fine Mrs. and daughter. Phil.

The Idea of Personal Freedom for All Mankind Dominated His Life--And Made Him Great--

So pure was Abraham Lincoln's concept that freedom is every man's heritage, that he believed no price too great to pay for securing it; indeed, he paid for maintaining that ideal with his own life! February 12, the nation honors his memory, and as on every Lincoln's birthday, the great and beautiful prose he composed as the law of the nation, and as his personal messages to the people will be re-spoken and re-read the nation over--inspiring all of us who today again fight for universal liberation of the enslaved and those threatened by fascist enslavers.
