and final decisions will be made here.

In passing a similar bill, however, the Senate included a provision giving the various state aviation authorities responsibility in the airport program. The differences in the House and Senate bills will be worked out in conference, and I am hopeful that the state control principle will be included in the final draft of the bill.

Apparently the timing of President Truman's message to Congress on the subject of military training was very bad. Although a number of military training bills have previously been introduced, a bill embodying all of the President's recommendations has not yet been considered in committee, nor have hearings been held on his specific proposals.

Had Mr. Truman waited until his proposal had been studied and considered by Congress, and then came to Congress with his arguments for the bill and his request, as President, that it be passed, his effort would have been much better received. At present, I believe members of Congress are not quite certain what was asked, nor has sentiment in Congress formed solidly behind the President's program.
