Rocket to Protect Crews Against Atomic Bomb

If present plans of navy scientists and engineers are successful, the United States soon will be producing a rocket weapon far more powerful than the famous German V-2. This rocket, together with new ship designs, will guard navy crews against atomic bomb attacks.

The new rocket, which has been named the Neptune, will be 45 feet long, will carry a 100 pound war-head 235 miles high, and will be suitable for launching from a ship, the navy said. The Neptune will rise twice the height attained by the German V-2 - which has exceeded 100 mile altitudes in tests at White Sands, N. M.

The navy said it has ordered 10 Neptunes from the Glenn L. Martin company, Baltimore, for $1,850,000. The rockets are to be delivered between 1948 and 1951. The first one should be ready by next February and tested in actual flight by June, 1948, the navy said. The tests will probably be held at White Sands and Point Mugu, Calif. The Neptune is the largest rocket which could conveniently be fired from a ship, the navy said. It explained that the supply of German V-2 rockets is nearly exhausted and new rockets of improved design are needed for further guided missile research. W. John Kenney, assistant navy secretary, said the navy was revising its ship designs according to knowledge gained in the Bikini atomic bomb tests and in the antarctic and cold weather expeditions. Future ships may enter combat with no one exposed at battle stations on the deck. Personnel and instruments will be shielded against attack.

Flag-Pole Sitting Was Popular in Ancient Days

While the popularity of flag-pole sitting has declined in recent years. if it runs true to form it will return for another season of novelty stunts. The originator of the custom was said to be a shepherd boy of Syria who entered a monastery when 13 years of age. The rigorous abstinence of the life, however, was not severe enough for the youngster, and he retired to a mountain near Antioch, where he sat enclosed in a circle of stones. This did not satisfy him as being of sufficient tor-

The Syrian lad then took up his fight for torture on the top of a high pillar and spent the rest of his life within the bounds of a four foot square platform on the pillar. Wearing only the skins of animals with an iron collar, he spent his time in talking to the people who gathered to see him, and went through his regular routine of devotional postures. After 30 years of kneeling, preaching and praying, the Syrian lad, Simeon Stylites, died and was buried at Antioch with the honor of a saint in the year of 459. His name in the Greek language meant pillar, and was applied to his followers who followed his mode of life.

Within 25 years the supply of copper and petroleum will have been exhausted, at present rate of consumption, according to the U. S. interior department. To remain self-sufficient in these minerals any longer, a department report said, the country would have to find improved means of working known sub-marginal deposits, which cannot be developed profitably these days. This was one of the highlights of a summary of the country's mineral position prepared by the bureau of mines and the geological survey, which have been working on it for the last four years. The report said ample coal and iron ore supplies, foundation of the country's industrial economy, were assured for "many decades." The agencies said that the United States depleted its minerals at an unprecedented rate during wartime, production in 1944 reaching a value of

81/2 billion dollars, or 22 tin.es of
