Tax Violations

PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S warning that there must be a tax increase recalls the fact that bureau of internal revenue experts estimate they could collect close to a billion dollars more annually without increasing taxes—if they had better income-tax enforcement.

Two years ago the 80th congress chopped off a huge army of income-tax examiners, a group of hard-working, underpaid public servants who have the unpleasant but necessary job of checking on people's income taxes. While part of this cut personnel has been reinstated, the tax examiners are still woefully understaffed and able to inspect only a fraction of the returns.

On top of this has developed another tax-payment deterrent—namely, delays and wire-pulling in the prosecution of tax frauds.

When the average taxpayer sees certain big shots getting away with spectacular tax violations, naturally he figures he is entitled to do the same. This is not the fault of the treasury tax examiners nor the prosecution officers of the justice department, most of whom are diligent public servants.

But when tax frauds are sent to U. S. district attorneys for criminal prosecution, interminable delays sometimes develop. Some district attorneys just do not want to prosecute. Sometimes local politics are involved, and since U. S. district attorneys are appointed under a political spoils system on the recommendation of local senators and congressmen, they are sometimes more inclined to take orders from congressmen rather than from the justice department.

Delayed Cases

But whatever the reasons, here are some tax-fraud cases which have been delayed or sidetracked between the justice department and the district attorneys in the field. In some cases no politics may be involved; but in any case the effect on the rest of the tax-paying public is bad.

Just outside Washington, D. C., the T-men found that the sheriff of Prince Georges county, Md., Earl Sheriff, had collected about $49,000 from gamblers during four years though he reported a total income of only $8,400. But when the justice department sent this case to U. S. Attorney Bernard Flynn in Baltimore, he sent it back with advice that it was a difficult case.

Again out in Kansas City, Kansas, the T-men caught an eminent doctor, Herbert Hessler, failing to report as income 1,000 fees received from patients during three years. The justice department sent the case to U. S. Attorney Lester Luther in Topeka for criminal prosecution, but Luther wrote back that he did not want to prosecute, because Dr. Hessler was too prominent in the community. The justice department instructed him to proceed anyway, however.

Patenotres Indicted

Another significant case, reported in this column as early as 1943, was that of Mrs. Eleanor Patenotre and her son over concealed profits made from the sale of the Philadelphia Inquirer, whereby the Patenotres paid a tax of only $1,567 in 1930 when they should have paid around $200,000. Thanks to the diligence of one or two treasury agents and a series of exposes by this column, the Patenotres were finally indicted in August 1948.

However, the significant fact is that the justice department had all its information available in 1945, and that Raymond Patenotre was in this country from 1945 on. Yet thanks to Patenotre's ability to hire one of the shrewdest tax attorneys in Washington, Ellsworth Alvord, no indictment was brought until 1948. Meanwhile there were libel threats against this column.

Even after the indictment, however, another year dragged by, with much legal haggling over a compromise. Finally it was arranged that Madame Patenotre would plead guilty and pay a two million dollar cash settlement if she didn't have to go to jail.

Most folks, of course, can't afford top lawyers or such big cash settlements.

West Virginia Gambler

Another interesting tax-fraud case was that of Bill Lias, well-known Wheeling, W. Va., gambler who originally pleaded guilty to cheating the government out of nearly a million dollars.

Save Your Game!

If you want to prevent waste on that hunting trip of yours this autumn, it would be wise to follow these directions issued by the U. S. forestry service:

GO PREPARED—Take at least a hunting knife, belt-axe, 30 feet of 1/4-inch rope, some twine, several pieces of clean wiping cloth, red flagging and four muslin sacks—each large enough to hold a quarter of the animal you hope to get. A small meat saw and some black pepper will also come in handy.

DRESSING OUT KILL—Tag animal as soon as it is killed and do not destroy evidence of sex. Open carcass from crotch to throat. Turn animal downhill so it will bleed freely. Be careful not to puncture the intestines or the paunch. In all operations prevent hair from coming in contact with meat. Open chest cavity by spreading with a stick. Drain off blood and wipe with clean cloth. Do not wash with water. If the animal must be taken out of the woods before cooling and quartering, leave the liver and heart in the body cavity.

Don't make a target out of yourself by carrying an exposed hide or antlers.

COOLING—Because the animal's body heat causes rapid spoilage, your kill should be completely cooled as soon as possible, preferably by hanging in a shady place.

QUARTERING—If state laws permit, it is best to quarter the animal before moving. The hide is worth saving and should be removed in one piece if possible. Place quarters in clean muslin bags and hang in shade. In warm weather, hang out only at night and wrap meat up during the day. ALWAYS KEEP THE MEAT COOL.

TRANSPORTATION—Don't make a target of yourself by carrying an exposed hide or antlers! Don't transport the animal on an automobile fender next to a heated motor. Transportation is, of course, easier if it is possible to pack the animal from the woods in quarters on a horse or in a pack sack.

STORAGE—Always unpack meat as soon as possible and store in a dry place. If weather permits, it should be allowed to "cure" for about a week or 10 days before storage.

No value in dollars and cents can be attributed to the recreational values of the sport of fishing and hunting. The fact that 50,000 fishermen and 70,000 hunters annually take to the field with rod or gun is proof, however, that this type of recreation is considered valuable to a large segment of our population.

Picking Pheasants

According to experts on the subject, many people who skin pheasants are destroying the fine flavor of this game bird. Because of its tender skin, the pheasant is difficult to pick once it has become cold after shooting. They may be picked very easily without breaking the skin, however, by brushing off the feathers immediately after the bird has been killed.

In warm weather, the bird should be rough dressed in the field, and the cavity stuffed with coarse grass, cornhusks or newspapers to help the cooling-out process.

After picking and dressing, the birds should be dropped into individual paper sacks before being placed in the hunting coat. Head and feet should always be left attached in the field for identification.

Under a new law, effective July 1, New York state game protectors alone may issue hunting licenses to minors under 17 seeking their first licenses and then only after the protector has schooled the applicant in the proper handling of firearms.

Adirondack Deer

Deer hunting prospects for the fall of 1949 will be better in the Adirondacks than they were last year. In the Catskills there will be little change, with some counties improving, others declining.

In the western counties where bucks and does were legal last fall, the deer population is substantially less than a year ago, but in the other counties of the region a general increase in number of deer will be evident.
