An eager young bell-ringer was trying to convince a crusty old timer that he should vote the straight Democratic ticket. "No," said the old man, "my grandfather was a Republican and my father was a Republican, and I'm a Republican too." "Why, that's foolish," the young man exclaimed. "Suppose your father and your grandfather had been horse-thieves — would that mean that you had to be a horse-thief too?" The old man pondered a bit, then said: "No, son — I reckon in that case I'd be a Democrat."
