News from Miss Showalter.

A letter from Miss Showalter to Mrs Bond, dated May 9, states that she had had fainting spells occasionally ever since she left here. She had to give up her teaching. The doctor in attendance didn't seem to know what was the matter with her.

The osteopath found a bunch on a rib just over the stomach and thought she had gall stones. Another doctor said she had appendicitis. Another doctor said it was just nerves.

She was then taken some place where they could try the Xray on her, and that doctor said it was the glands of the throat and body. So her throat was packed in ice for over a week. The doctor then decided that a rib was broken loose.

A letter dated May 20, stated that it was finally decided that she had appendicitis, and at 10 o'clock Tuesday, May 18, she was operated on. Her appendix, which was all bound down by adhesions, was removed, and it was found there were other serious complications which were worse than appendicitis. She suffered much and up to the date of the last letter she had to be kept under hypos.
