Goats for Sale—I have two milk goats, a buck and a nanny, for sale. They are high bred and can be registered. The nanny is an especially good milker.

Fred Giselman.

The above ad appeared in last week's Scio Tribune. We remember seeing one of the Mutt and Jeff pictures once that propounded this conundrum. What kind of goats are the best milkers? The answer was "The female goats." The ad seems to favor the female in this instance.

Arrested for Making Beer

Jesse Scott of Albany, was fined $250 last Friday on a charge of unlawfully manufacturing and possessing intoxicating liquor, on a complaint sworn to by Sheriff Kendall.

When the raid was made the officers found 400 bottles of beer and nearly two gallons of dandelion wine in the barn of Scott's father. Also a bottle capping machine, a large copper kettle and a copper pipe resembling the kind used in stills, and an ice box.

The liquor was made on Mr Scott's father's farm not far from Boston mill east of Shedd.

The place is rented by a man by the name of Nelson, who was not implicated in the work in any manner.

He was arrested when he brought fifty gallons and two ten gallon barrels of beer to his father's barn and he pleaded guilty when he was taken to Justice Oliver's court.

The Sky Devil Locklear
The Great Air Robbery

An aerial abduction in which the villain stifles the cries of the heroine, drags her limply to the cockpit of a speedy aeroplane, and whisks her into the clouds, is one of the novel thrills in "The Great Air Robbery," the remarkable Universal photodrama.

Even more breath-taking, however, is the exciting pursuit of the hero, in a similar air-racer, which ends when the hero climbs to the top of his swaying machine and leaps to a rope ladder dangling from the running gear of the abductor's craft.

This remarkable feat is performed by Lieutenant Ormer L Locklear, who astonished army aviation circles last Spring, when he first accomplished the hazardous change over a flying field in Texas.

Although he never had appeared on the screen before, Lieutenant Locklear played his role as hero in the air drama with the ease of a veteran moving picture actor. He was supported by Francelia Billington as the heroine, and Raymond Ripley, as the villain. Miss Billington recently gained much praise for her work in "Blind Husbands," Eric von Stroheim's remarkable picture of the Alps. Ripley is well known as a screen villain, as air pirate, he proves with conviction that the good old days of Jessie James may be revived again when the air is a great highway.
