Some time ago Mr Kimbrell went to work in Eugene and one day he accidentally got his right thumb bruised. He paid little or no attention but in a week or so it developed into a felon and he had to quit work. He has been home for the last ten days nursing his felon and walking the floor of nights. The suffering has practically left him now but the doctor says it will be two weeks yet before he can resume work with impunity.

The Kostello Shows.

Last night the Lou Kostello Shows gave their first performance at the city hall.

It was a clean performance from beginning to end.

Mr Kostello presented some very skillful stunts with the clubs, and we will say this for them, they were the best we have ever seen.

His juggling the banjo was certainly wonderful to the uninitiated (meaning us) for he had that banjo playing whether he was picking it or not. He must have had it trained. It was like the Irishman's boomerang, you could hit a man with it where he wasn't as well as where he was. He could use that banjo for a club to hit a man on the head with and it would keep on playing.

The moving pictures were good. A street car ride through Stockholm was a very pleasing affair.

Mr Kostello is certainly an artist in his profession.

The purpose of the show was to introduce numerous medicines, but they are not sold there but only at the drug store.

They expect to be here every night for a week (except Sunday.)

If you go once you will want to go again. Admission is 15 and 25 cents. Complete change of program every night.

Tuning Church Bells.

An English clergyman, says the London Telegraph, was the first to call the attention of the musical public to the fact that bells are rarely in tune, and that the fault can be remedied if a church bell was originally in tune with itself. According to his theory, a bell must have at least five tones at correct intervals to form a perfect musical chord. At first the work of tuning was done with a hammer, a chisel and a file, and a magnificent tenor bell in Norfolk, England, was thus reduced three-quarters of an inch in diameter; but modern bell foundries employ a machine with a revolving cutter that shaves the metal near the crown of the bell until the tuner, aided by a tuning fork, has hit the right pitch.

Russian Priests.

The Russian priest has always been considered as a holy person, and his hands and tunic are reverently kissed by the peasants. The orthodox priest wears a very wide and long tunic, black, gray or brown in color. His religion forbids him to cut his hair and beard, so that many priests, who have abundant hair, are obliged to plait it in the same way as a woman, hiding the braid under the tunic. Nobody can become a priest if he is not married, and not long ago clergymen were obliged to marry only clergymen's daughters. A country priest is generally very poor, and lives exclusively on fees paid him at baptisms, weddings and funerals, and these fees are largely in the form of eggs, chickens, flour, etc., which he receives from the peasant instead of money.—Current History.

Big Game in Africa.

As a white man with a gun, Lord Dewar was called upon once by the natives to deal with a rogue elephant, says the London Chronicle. He shot it, and it rolled over, but got up and charged him. All he recollected seeing was two big ears and a trunk, and the whole of his life passed before his mind in a second. But the animal suddenly swerved toward a native, and a shot at 20 yards brought it down. Where the railroads from the coast to Nairobi passed through the big game preserve, wild animals roamed about the track in freedom. While he was riding on the cowcatcher of the engine a rhinoceros charged the train and nearly derailed it.

Easy Job.

Interesting story, that about a man out of work, who is said to have been told by a friend, "I can get you a good job down at Fore River." "But I don't know anything about that," was the reply. "Oh," said the friend, "it will be an easy job, as an Inspector. All you will have to do will be to walk around and look wise and draw your salary." The man walked around and looked wise for four days, but he was annoyed because another man followed him everywhere he went. Finally he couldn't stand it any longer. "Say," said he, "what are you following on my heels for, everywhere I go?" "Why," said the other man, "I'm your helper."—Boston Globe.
