

Jots and Tittles

Mrs. Morris King of Brownsville is recovering from a serious surgical operation performed at an Albany hospital.

Report comes that J. W. Moore scored highest in the civil service examination for the Halsey postmastership. The appointing power has its choice among the three standing highest.

At the revival meetings in the Methodist church, among those professing an awakening interest were some young men who went forward and cast their supplies of cigars into the stove. If they are able to stay with this declaration of independence from the insidious habit their sincerity and fortitude will deserve recognition.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Moore went to Albany Friday afternoon, Mr. Moore being on his way to attend the meeting of the Linn County Realty board at Lebanon, which took place Saturday. He returned Sunday, but Mrs. Moore visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Bond, and sister, Mrs. Claud Davis. Mrs. Bond was recovering from an attack of pneumonia, while Clifford, 9-year-old son of Mrs. Davis, is suffering from typhoid.

There was talk during the week among candidates for the postmastership of arranging to have a vote taken which would show the preference of the people of the community in the matter. We are not aware, however, that there was anything more than talk in that connection.

Miss Mary Carey, who has been on the sick list a great deal of the time all winter, was taken to the Salem hospital today by her father, W. A. Carey, with the hope of relief.

L. A. McKern was in Albany Monday as witness in the litigation between A. M. Templeton and F. M. Franklin, the latter he said he did not know much about the bone of contention.

Probably the flu is no more prevalent at Shedd than in other parts of the country, but our correspondent has mentioned more of the cases. It is of a mild form, but is nation-wide and causing some deaths.

Henrietta Starnes underwent a serious operation at the Catholic hospital at Eugene. An abscess had formed around the jugular vein. She was under the influence of ether one hour and fifteen minutes. At last reports the patient was doing nicely, being able to come home Sunday.

Sweet Thoughts

When you pass the Stewart & Price Confectionery think of how appreciative your sweetheart or wife, mother or sister would be if you sent her a box of strictly fresh chocolates or a mixed assortment of fruity sweetmeats. You'll have cause to thank us for the suggestion because we know how it has worked in other cases.

JUDGE OPPOSES FAT ALIMONY

New York Jurist Says Divorcee Can't Get All the Luxury She Had in Marriage.

New York—Justice, Guy, in the Manhattan Supreme court, told prospective alimony seekers that after a separation or divorce they cannot expect to be supported in the luxurious style to which they became accustomed during the marriage.

"It is not the policy of the law," Justice Guy declared, "that a woman who is asking to end the marriage contract shall have all the luxury of marriage. She is not entitled to one-third of her husband's income. She cannot expect all the extras that a loving husband would naturally bestow upon her if the two were living contentedly together."

INFERNO OUTDONE

Wails of Starving Children Assault the Ears of Relief Workers at Erivan.

The tragic progression of famine conditions in Armenia is strikingly shown in the personal reports brought back by State Director J. J. Handsaker of the Near East Relief when he visited that section last August, and in the letters that have been received at intervals since.

"When I was there in the late summer," said Mr. Handsaker, "The conditions were truly appalling, despite the fact that the orphanages were filled to their utmost capacity and everything possible was being done. I myself selected a little naked girl, with nineteen others from among hundreds of starving children to fill the only possible vacancies in the orphanage at Erivan at that time. However, the weather was warm, and the refugees could manage in some way to keep alive. Reports from Erivan in late September told of the coming of the cold weather, and how the reserves were drawn upon for the opening of additional soup-kitchens. Starving men, women and children from all sections were flocking desperately to the Near East Relief stations in the hope of getting work, food and clothing. Two months later, under date of Nov. 29, we have news of the frightful situation that followed. This news came to Dr. Esther Lovejoy, of Portland, Oregon, who is national chairman of the American Women's Hospitals, from Dr. Mabel Elliott, in charge of the American Women's Hospitals in the Near East section. This organization is co-operating with the Near East Relief, and is handling the medical work of the latter at Erivan. Below is an excerpt from Dr. Mabel Elliott's letter to Dr. Lovejoy:

"I cannot begin to tell you, doctor, of the misery here in spite of the enormous amount of work being done. Since I have been here 852 is the lowest number of cases we have had in our hospitals at any one time, and yet they are dying on all corners of the city. Last Sunday we went out on horseback to see how things were beyond the town; we passed a dead horse by the side of the road, and three wretched human beings were sitting beside it, taking the flesh off with their hands. It was a most repulsive sight.

"All day long you can hear the groans and wails of little children outside our building in hopes we can and will pick them up. If the sun shines for a little while they quiet down, and then when it rains they begin again. One day the rain turned into snow and it was awful to listen to them. The note of terror that came into the general wail was distinctly perceptible, although my room was upstairs, and the window was closed. They well know what a single night out in the snow would mean to them. We are picking them up as fast as possible. "You can see by my report how many more patients we have than beds, and the same holds good in the orphanages. There is no use crowding them in so that they will all die."

School Essays

(By Janet Boggs)

At the Close of Day:

The molten sun, swimming in the heat haze, turned red before slipping from sight; twilight crept over the valley, an advancing army clad in royal purple. A sultry breeze which had been dormant all day played languidly with the grass and trees. Stars studded the heavens, and a frail moon appeared uncertainly on the horizon. In an instant the day had vanished, and the murky dusk had come.

(By Mearle Straley)

Sunset at Nye Beach:

I was standing on the sandy beach gazing eagerly westward into the arch of June blue, waiting for the setting of the sun. A few fluffy white clouds, shot with gold from the sun's rays, were drifting endlessly about.

The sun, a gold ball, seemed to have suddenly dropped onto the ocean, and was riding the waves away from us, and it cast brilliant reflections of rainbow colors into the sea. The farther away the sun rolled, the smaller it grew, until finally it seemed to be swallowed by the ocean, leaving the sky a peaceful blue, in which rested long golden bars, then the gold caught fire and the heavens were aflame with color and light, while the white fluffy clouds and the cerise tint in the sky, intermingled with the blue of the sky, seemed to form an enormous American flag floating in the breeze. These gradually faded, leaving the parting crimson of the summer sun.

(By Alta Hayes)

Fable:

Once upon a time there was a young man who was addicted to an unfortunate habit of falling in love with all the beautiful young ladies. He just couldn't resist Maggie's wistful blue eyes or Jane's white hands.

This time it was Susan's golden hair which shone so beautifully in the sunlight that tangled his heart-strings, and thenceforth Susan led him over many thorny paths.

Now all good things must end. One day as he appeared at Susan's home unexpectedly, he found her sitting on the back porch, with raven locks falling over her shoulders, and just preparing to renounce their color for another period of time. Whereupon the young man was brot down to earth with a dreadful thump.
