

RIALTO THEATER, FRIDAY

Wm. S. HART

'Travelin' On'

A Paramount Picture

The story of a man who lived to fight—till his first defeat taught him love.

Filled with the clatter of gunshot and hoofbeats.

Beating fast with a heart as big as all outdoors.

And GOOD COMEDY

Jots and Tittles

The county fair managers are planning a "candidates' day." If all the candidates in the county attend there will be a crowd.

Last week W. E. Garrett of Grass Valley, Ore., visited with John and Mary LaRue, Mrs. Garrett's half sister.

Mrs. Lillian Kirk, accompanied by C. P. Stafford and wife, Mrs. James Drinkard and Mrs. Anna Walton, motored to the county seat Wednesday.

William Swank and Florence Schure of Brownsville were married a few days ago; also Burt S. Arthurs and Ruth Marie Chesley of the same place.

The Pacific Co-operative Poultry Producers, embracing members in Linn and several other counties, has unanimously elected E. J. Dixon of the Estes-Dixon company, Portland poultry brokers, as general manager of sales.

Mrs. Bond of Albany, mother of Mrs. J. W. Moore, who was injured when the auto she was riding in jumped a bank and capsized, is slowly mending. She may be out of bed in a couple of weeks but the physicians say it may be months before she walks without crutches, although no bones were broken.

Mrs. Mildred McEban while visiting at the Ramsdell home, near Brownsville, was taken suddenly ill. A physician was summoned, who told her nothing but an operation for appendicitis would save her life. She went to Corvallis in an ambulance, and the offending appendix was removed and she is now reported to be recovering.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary society held its last meeting of the conference year last Friday, with Mrs. Brandon. The meeting was saddened by the serious illness of Mrs. McWilliams, the president, who could not be with the members, and their prayer thought was for her speedy recovery. Officers elected for next year were: President, Mrs. Hadley; vice-president, Mrs. Sneed; corresponding secretary, Mrs. McWilliams; secretary, Gertrude Smith; treasurer, Mary Miller; standard bearer superintendent, Mrs. Foote; junior standard bearer superintendent, Mrs. Morn-

Fifteen or twenty persons who gathered at the Koontz corner Tuesday evening to attend the announced Salvation Army meeting were disappointed when there was no meeting. It was raining so hard in Albany that the army people thought nobody would turn out to an outdoor meeting. They were surprised when they learned that there was no rain in Halsey at the time for the meeting. Those Albany people don't know what a pleasant climate we have over here.

How do you like this week's paper? The editor does not like it very well, but better than he likes one of Job's comforters which has diverted his attention from business all the week.

Herbert E. Wilson, the fake minister who once filled the Baptist pulpit at Brownsville, has been convicted of the murder of Herbert Cox, a fellow prisoner, when the two were trying to break jail at Los Angeles, and sentenced to prison for life.

An Illinois grand jury, after much protest that the Herrin massacre was a local matter and no business of anybody outside the state, has so far responded to the general outcry of horror at it as to indict one man and to turn him loose on bonds. If anything more is done in the matter we'll probably hear of it. Illinois seems rather proud of being wild and wooly.

A CAPITAL OFFENSE.

Dictionaries and treatises on punctuation and capitalization are not original authorities on those subjects. They are authorities only as far as they indicate the practice of the majority of the users of the language.

Neither the English nor any other language in general use has been built up according to rule. The effort has been, in writing rules for language, to formulate the common, ordinary practice of those who use it.

Walker's and Worcester's dictionaries fell into disuse in America because they failed to present the practice of the American people, and Noah Webster, when he put forth what he called "an American dictionary" of the English language, made a success because he studied and formulated that practice.

With regard to the use of capital letters, many of our colleges and higher institutions of learning have made the mistake of formulating rules that are not in consonance with the practice of the most popular writers and publishers. The practice prevails today in essentially all the more important newspaper offices, and in a majority of the others, of following what printers call "the down" style in capitalization. The prevailing style of capitalization may be illustrated thus:

"President Harding is the president of the United States; the secretary of state is Secretary Mellon; the Mississippi river flows into the gulf of Mexico and its waters thence reach the Atlantic ocean; the Southern Pacific company operates railroads." Though they sometimes capitalize pronouns referring to the deity they respect the inhibition of the best authorities and never do so unless the pronoun is "used emphatically and without a noun, thus: "God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform; we bow before Him who giveth and taketh life."

When a pupil of a college school of journalism graduates and obtains employment on one of the big dailies, which address millions of people through a lifetime as compared with hundreds reached by the pedagogue during a few school years, he has to unlearn what he has been taught about capitalization and learn what is the usage of the people, who make the language what it is.

The translators of the authorized version of the Bible were guilty of lapses in orthography and grammatical construction, such as adding an "s" to the Hebrew plural noun "cherubim" to make an English plural for "cherub," and making Paul say he was "of the most strait sect," but their capitalization of pronouns was in accordance with the best usages of today. Thus we read: "The Father himself, which hath sent me, hath borne witness of me. Ye have neither heard his voice at any time nor seen his shape."

"HEARD" NORTHERN LIGHTS

Sound From the Aurora Borealis Not Uncommon, Say Travelers in Labrador.

Whether or not the aurora borealis, so beautiful to the eye, is ever accompanied by a characteristic sound is disputed by scientists, but G. M. Gathorne-Hardy, in an address before the Royal Geographical society, claims to have heard it in Labrador in the autumn of 1920.

"Two points occur to me as worthy of mention in this connection," said the speaker. "The first is that I have occasionally seen what appears to be the aurora by day in the form of faint clouds having the characteristic appearance of the bands and streamers. The second point I raise with some hesitation, as I believe the balance of scientific opinion is against its possibility. That is, that, judging merely by the evidence of my senses, I should say that I had sometimes heard the aurora, when in rapid movement making a faint, crisp, rustling noise. If this is a hallucination, it is a very strange one."

His evidence corroborates that of Capt. H. P. Dawson, in charge of the British polar station: "The Indians and the voyagers of the Hudson's Bay company, who often pass their nights in the open, say that it (the sound) is not uncommon." On the one occasion when he heard it himself he says: "The sound was like the swishing of a ship or the noise produced by a sharp squall of wind in the upper rigging of a ship."

QUEER CHINESE "COPY BOOK"

A curious kind of copy book is used by Chinese children. The ideographs are so complicated that a youngster cannot copy them free-hand, but must begin by tracing them from a model, as American children trace maps. An ordinary copy book such as is used in the lower grades has no space for the child to write. The pages are entirely covered with copy. Eight characters are generally shown on one page, each in a square and each made about ten times the size of ordinary writing. Over this copy is placed tracing paper and the character is drawn as accurately as possible.

sible. The books are written in black and corrected in red ink by the schoolmasters.

UMPIRE'S "STOREHOUSE"

Pandora's box was never the cause of so much combative curiosity as the hole in the ground to the right of the home plate at the Polo grounds, which contains the supply of baseballs used during the game.

Rumor has it among the youngsters around the ball park that the umpire occasionally forgets to remove the balls at the end of the daily contest. As for a basis for this gossip, they mention one boy who sneaked into the grounds after a recent game, sneaked off the square board which covers the treasure trove and sneaked away with the three brand new, shiny horsehide spheres.—New York Sun.

DROWNING HIM OUT

"Nothing delights Mr. Grabcojn more than to tell his guests of the time when he was poor and worked in a section gang."

"Yes, and if any of the guests happen to be musically inclined that's the time Mrs. Grabcojn asks them to sing or play something."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

PROSPECTS UNREALIZED

"Crimson Gulch has a great future."

"Yes," replied Cactus Joe. "But that doesn't impress us old settlers much. It's been a-havin' it for the last fifty years."

ARRANGE TO AID MOTHERS

Ten towns near Cleveland, Ohio, had the benefit this summer of a baby clinic on wheels. A completely fitted truck in charge of physicians and trained nurses furnished this free service.—Scientific American.

The federal senate has passed a bill limiting the campaign expenditures of aspirants for places in that body to $10,000 and of candidates for the house of representatives to $5000.

The Oregonian says the proposed tariff on wool is "full of dynamite," and that "campaign material is furnished democ rats." But the democrats needn't get excited. It may be a year or two before the two talkfests at Washington finish with that bill, and then the president must sign it before it is a law.
