SAVANT MEETS TROGLODYTES

Strange Black Race Visited in Dug-out Caves of African Arabland.

Horace D. Ashton, a member of the Explorers' club of New York, has returned after traveling in a camel caravan through southern Algeria into the land where the natives are known as Troglodytes. In this section of the world, where the white man rarely penetrates, are from 250,000 to 300,000 black people, he said, with features strangely akin to the Arab.

They live in dugouts in the cliffs and gain their sustenance from crude grain farming and the meat of goats and lambs. He declared that he discovered a sheik in Durat who manifested an extreme fondness for tin cans for decorative purposes.

Among them were a number of tins that had been imported from the United States and still bore the labels placed thereon by American canners, says the New York Sun and Globe.

E. Gardner and family were business callers at Corvallis Saturday.

A WELL EARNED REST

After 49 years of good works, Mrs. W. J. Ribelin died Saturday afternoon at her home, where she had been suffering for thirty-seven days, since her breakdown, and having lain unconscious for three days.

Mrs. Ribelin had been a resident of Linn county since her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Finley, came from Illinois in 1846 and took a donation claim at Crawfordville. Her first husband, Mr. Vawter, died, and in 1866 she married Whipple Hayes of Halsey. Ten years later Mr. Hayes was murdered in cold blood by a man to whom he had sold a town lot with a promise that no intoxicants should be sold upon it and whom he charged with violating that agreement. That the murderer paid the law's penalty on the gallows was but poor compensation for the crime.

About a dozen years later she married W. J. Ribelin and the pair have passed the period of time usually counted as a generation among mankind in happy harmony.

The funeral was held Sunday afternoon from the M. E. church of which she had been a lifelong member, Rev. Robert Parker officiating, and interment was at the Smith cemetery.

Her venerable husband survives her as do four sisters and three brothers, a remarkable instance of longevity in a family. Mrs. Eliza Brandon of this city is a sister, as are Mrs. Lizzie Crawford and Mrs. Nancy Bell of Idaho and Mrs. Edna Henry of Prosser, Wash. Two of the brothers were Alexander Finley of California, who with his wife had been at the Ribelin home for some time; George Finley of Portland, who was at the funeral, and William Finley of Hermiston. Mrs. Gertie Pentland of California is a daughter and Frank Hayes of the same state a son of the deceased.

John Keeney of Portland was the guest of his niece, Mrs. J. W. Moore, and family Saturday.

Chas. P. Poole and family of Lebanon, accompanied by Mrs. Poole's mother, Mrs. Wm. Curtis, were Halsey visitors Friday.

"But life, being weary of these worldly bars, Never lacks power to diamias itself." —Julius Caesar.

"Why is suicide held not to be right?" was one of the questions put to Socrates during that last long talk he had with his friends while he waited for his jailer to bring him the cup of poison.

According to Plato's account, Socrates answered: "I suppose you wonder why . . . when a man is better dead he is not permitted to be his own benefactor, but must wait for the hand of another. . . . I admit the appearance of inconsistency, but there may not be any real inconsistency, after all, in this. There is a doctrine uttered in secret that man is a prisoner who has no right to open the door of his prison and run away; this is a great mystery which I do not quite understand."

Our western laws and churches hold suicide to be wrong, and there is a general feeling that when a man commits suicide, he breaks the rules by which the game of life is played. We know that in a race, for example, a man is expected to finish the course, even though all the other runners have crossed the line an hour before him. To the bystanders there seems no sense in this. To them it seems that after enough men have crossed the line to score all the points that can be scored, the other runners should be allowed to step over the side lines and quit the race. They cannot see any reason for making a man run after all chances of scoring seem over; but the trainer sees reason in the proceedings. Life is frequently likened to a race.

Some people hold that the two cases are not analogous because the player enters a race voluntarily and we human beings are born into life without our consent. Others hold that we do enter life voluntarily. The latter believe, with Socrates and the Buddhists, in the transmigration of the soul. They insist that the soul that does not wish for life is not reincarnated.

This is, of course, a subject about which nobody knows, though many may speculate, trying to twist texts this way and that to suit their own beliefs.

WHY THE EDITOR CUTS

The Enterprise has been paying more for linotype setting lately than its income will warrant. Its income must be increased a little or the typesetting decreased. The latter can be done and the same amount of news given by omitting superfluous words. Don't be surprised if the editor cuts the words "Everybody is cordially invited" from the announcement of a public meeting. The sentence does not tell anything that was not known without it.

Copy for the pages that go to press Tuesday is sent to the linotype by the 6:45 a. m. stage to Brownsville. The last copy goes at the same hour Wednesday. What comes in Wednesday, if used, is set at night by a man with poor sight and with other work in the office that occupies the daylight hours. He has to have rest and he cuts copy ruthlessly.

The death rate from tuberculosis throughout the United States has been cut squarely in half in fourteen years. The reduction was from 200 deaths (per 100,000) in 1908 to 94 in 1923. The little penny Christmas seal has largely financed the campaign that has made this marvelous progress toward health possible. Buy them.
