 Those who habitually send in their copy early tickle the printer man in the right place. If we were giving prizes for this kind of promptness the Southern Pacific and the Globe theatre company could divide the first prize. There is always a chance to put their advertisements in type Sat-

 "You have fallen into your rank, and I have fallen into mine."
 —A Tale of Two Cities.
 If we mix together oil and vinegar and set the vessel aside, the oil will promptly rise to the top. If we add an egg to the mixture and beat the whole very vigorously, we can for a while circumvent nature and keep the oil and vinegar in mixture; but if the sauce is set away for a time, the oil breaks its bonds and returns to the top.
 If we toss a measure of stone, gravel and sand into a vessel of water, shake the vessel thoroughly, then set it aside to settle, we shall find the stone at the bottom, the gravel above that and the sand on top.
 The oil and the gravel both found their places by means of their weight—heavy things sink, light things float. No one has yet figured out what there is in human relations that corresponds to specific gravity; but each man has a place or a rank in the universe and invariably falls into it sooner or later.
 Whatever it is that determines rank men are conscious of its presence when it is present. Let the officers of a regiment be killed and if there is a leader in the ranks he will assume command. No one will tell him to lead—he will step forward and the others will follow him. History tells us that the thing has happened time after time in battle. Gather together a hundred boys from all parts of the country and put them together in a camp somewhere and within a week three or four boys will be leading the rest. No one will tell them to be leaders—they will take the place for themselves as naturally as oil takes its place in a mixture.
 It is not mental ability that causes the difference in rank, as was obvious in the case of Carton and Stryver, where the brighter man held the lesser rank. It is not energy, for the excessively energetic man often ranks lower than his more deliberate brother. It is not education, for many a man with his Ph. D. ranks lower than some other man who barely finished grammar school.
 Many philosophers have thought that the thing that determines rank among men is one's mental attitude toward rank. Emerson, for example, says, "Beware what you set your heart upon, for it shall surely be yours."

 "I tell you yet again, Banquo's buried; he cannot come out on's grave."
 —Macbeth.
 "That the dead are seen no more," writes Samuel Johnson, "I will not undertake to maintain, against the concurrent and varied testimony of all ages and of all nations. There is no people, rude or learned, among whom apparitions of the dead are not related and believed. This opinion, which perhaps prevails as far as human nature is diffused, could become universal only by its truth; those that never heard of one another would not have agreed in a tale which nothing but experience can make credible. That it is doubted by single cavaliers can very little weaken the general evidence; and some who deny it with their tongues confess it by their fears."
 The great majority of ghosts are, of course, frauds; but no research organization has ever been able to prove that all ghosts are frauds. No one has yet proved that Lady Macbeth was right when she asserted that Banquo could not come out of his grave.
 The subject of ghosts is of interest because of its bearing on the subject of the immortality of the soul. If ghosts exist, then obviously the soul does not die at the same time that the body dies. Although Socrates, by masterly reasoning, convinced himself of the immortality of the soul, and although all the great religious teachers have taught the immortality of the soul, there are many who have not been convinced; because, as Plato quotes Cebes as saying, "in what relates to the soul, men are apt to be incredulous; they fear that when she leaves the body her place may be nowhere, and that on the very day of death she may be destroyed and perish—immediately on her release from the body, issuing forth like smoke or air and vanishing away into nothingness."
 Socrates was of the opinion that the soul that was pure at death would not return as a ghost. Such a soul was totally severed from the body, at death, and gathered herself into herself, in a state that seems analogous to the Buddhist's Nirvana, of which Arnold wrote:
 The aching crase to live ends, and life glides—
 Lifeless—to nameless quiet, nameless joy,
 Blessed NIRVANA—sinless, stirless rest—
 That change which never changes!
 Socrates believed, however, that few souls are pure at death. For most of us, "each pleasure and pain is a sort of nail which nails and rivets the soul to the body." Most souls love the body and dread the invisible existence to which pure souls go. These are the souls that may be seen "prowling about tombs and sepulchers," made visible to our eyes by the alloy and impurity that cling to the soul as a result of the love of life and of the body.

High School Notes
 (Agnes Hayes Reporter)
 The Seniors are making fast progress in practicing their class play, "The Wrong Mr. Wright," which they intend to present the latter part of December. Three Sophomore boys, George Cross, Frank Koontz and Thomas Palmer, take part in it.
 Wednesday of last week at the regular meeting of the student body it was voted that the high school buy a new basketball and also purchase another basket to replace the one broken.
 At a special meeting Friday afternoon, called by the president, Kenneth Van Nice, the student body voted to join the athletic association, therefore another basketball will be bought, so that each team can have one.
 The third period in the afternoon, which has heretofore been taken up by physical training, has been lengthened to one hour and given to French and English III. This new arrangement makes it possible for the students to begin basketball practice at 3:30. The boys' and girls' teams alternate daily.
 The Junior class chose very attractive rings for their '25 senior class. The Sophomores have chosen a model for their senior class rings, but it may be changed before the time arrives.
 The grade children, under their teacher, Mona Bond, intend to give a play next Wednesday at the opera house.
 (By an Enterprise Reporter)
 The boys and girls are practicing basketball. It has not yet been decided who shall play in the teams.
 Georgina Clark was absent a day and a half last week.
 Melba Neal was absent one day this week.
 The piano pupils of Mrs. Henry F.

English will give a recital Friday evening at the Methodist church. Two of the pupils are high school students.
 Mr. Jones, treasurer of the North western business school, addressed the high school students on their future occupations Tuesday morning.
 Miss Bertha Leitner has charge of the high school basketball team exercises.
TEACHERS' INSTITUTE
 At the teachers' institute Saturday thirty-five teachers from this part of the county gathered.
 Dr. Bursch of O. A. C. advocated a completely new system of marking the standing of pupils, whereby they would be graded according to mental efficiency.
 Dr. Clarke of the U. of O. talked on the books pupils are urged to read outside of class work.
 County Superintendent Edna Geer stated that this was the first of three such institutes planned for the county. She secured the promise of the teachers to observe national education week.

STUDY CLUB
 A further study of Scotland was enjoyed by the members of the Women's club Thursday at the H. F. English home. The lesson covered Holyrood palace and environs, the schools, and monuments and memorials, and was ably given by Mrs. Martin Cummings and Mrs. J. W. Moore. A short musical program was given by Mrs. English, Miss Donna Robertson and Mrs. Stafford.
 A round-table of helpful Christmas suggestions was an enjoyable feature of the afternoon.
 The hostess was assisted in serving by Mrs. Moore.
 The club will meet again December 6 at the home of Mrs. G. W. Mornhinweg.
 Campers from eastern Oregon at Dad's and Mam's restaurant camp ground said they left snow and freezing weather at home and found a mild spring day here.
