Palmer, who has been very ill for some time, continues unimproved.

The grand jury meets tomorrow to sit on the quartet arrested for robbing Spurlin's home near Harrisburg.

Howard Ternan arrived from St. Helens Monday to visit his mother, Mrs. J. C. Bramwell.

William Wheeler failed to dodge quickly enough on the highway yesterday and a car bumped his leg and plugged his ribs against his lungs with enough force to knock the breath out of him for a few minutes. He and D. J. Hayes have taken lessons and by the time they are of age may become entitled to the degree of A. D.—Artful Dodger.

C. C. Murphy, after visiting at various points in California, stopped at Halsey to visit his cousin, Mrs. Adda Ringo. He Roland Marks was over from O. A. C. for the week end.

Mrs. Claron Gormley was visiting in Albany and Portland several days last week.

Miss Grace Kirk will give a Christmas program at the Kirk school, where she teaches, Thursday evening.

Mrs. A. E. Foote visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Robinson, near Junction City Wednesday. Her mother accompanied her home for a short visit.

M. H. Shook returned the first of the week from Portland, where he had been on business and to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Shook. E. E. Gormley was in charge of the organization of the Bend Brick company, located 2 1/2 miles west of Bend, and the Central Oregon Brick company, located near Terrebonne, has been announced. The new company will be known as the Central Oregon Brick company.

Because of the growth of the dairy industry in Klamath county the Port Klamath creamery, which had been shut down for several months, has reopened. More than 200 dairy cattle have been shipped into the Port Klamath country since October.

Eric W. Allen, dean of the school of journalism at the University of Oregon, will be in Chicago December 29, 30 and 31, attending the annual conference of the association of Schools and Departments of Journalism, and the Association of Teachers of Journalism.

Prices for practically all foodstuffs to be used at the state institutions during the six months starting January 1, 1925, have increased from 5 to 35 per cent over those quoted on June 10, 1924, according to bids received at the office of the state board of control.

An amendment to the interior department bill as passed by the house, continuing the appropriation for the Owyhee irrigation project in Malheur county until July 1, 1926, was adopted by the senate appropriations committee. The amendment was offered by Senator McNary.

Organization of a state constabulary to supersede all special state commissions and agencies now charged with the enforcement of particular penal statutes, is contemplated in a resolution unanimously adopted by the District Attorneys' association of the state in annual session in Portland.

Charles G. Dawes, vice-president, will be on the program at the annual convention of the Oregon Wool Growers' association in Pendleton January 14-15, if a report from Boise that he would be there for the Idaho meeting is correct, Mac Hoke, secretary of the Oregon association says.

In accordance with a contract let by orchardists of the Rogue River valley last fall to the American Can company for shipment from Toledo, O., between November 20 and December 14, 110,000 orchard heaters, or smudge pots, in five cars, arrived at Medford to be used in heating orchards next spring.

A total of $111,965.63 has been apportioned to the schools throughout Tillamook county since January, 1924, according to a report of the county school superintendent's office. The funds from which this was derived include $44,128 from county, $5430.22 from the state, $42,962.50 from the elementary fund and $19,435.91 high school.

The work of issuing 1925 motor vehicle licenses has started in the secretary of state's office at Salem. Under the law these licenses cannot be used legally until January 1. In issuing and sending out 1925 motor vehicle licenses earlier than usual this year the secretary of state is of the opinion that an eleven-hour congestion will be avoided.

Organization of the Willamette valley growers and levying a duty of six cents a pound on cherries imported into the United States are necessary in event the cherry industry of the northwest is to prosper, according to D. L. Beard of The Dalles, who has returned from points in California, where he conferred with a number of cherry growers' organizations.

Resolutions were adopted at a meeting in La Grande of 50 sportsmen, held under auspices of the Wing, Fin and Fleetfoot club, advocating shortening of the trout season indefinitely, holding the deer season to the month of October with a limit of one buck, asking for a grouse season from September 1 to October 31, and recommending a bounty of $50 on cougars.

B. F. Jones of Newport appeared before a subcommittee of the house committee on claims in Washington, D. C., in behalf of a claim of Lincoln county for $186,000. It is contended that the government in the sale of the Blodgett timber tract and accompanying sawmill deprived the county of one-third of its taxable property by a deal which gave the timber and mill to the Pacific Spruce company on a tax-exempt basis for years to come.

Assertions that the Indian bureau's plan of educating Indian boys and girls with white children has proved a failure and a plea that the Indian boarding school formerly operated at the Umatilla agency be reopened were made in a public statement at Pendleton by Captain Sumpkin, chief of the Cayuse tribe. The Indians have been advocating the opening of the old boarding school for some time, and a delegation will leave soon for Washington, D. C., in an effort to obtain action on their request.

Children's Farm Home

The W. C. T. U. farm home has two buildings for girls and one for boys. Not enough money was raised this fall to build another boys' structure, so the project was deferred until spring.

There are 75 children at the home, most of whom have never known a real Christmas-time until they went there, and many went this year who have never seen one. The generosity of friends of little children throughout the state is depended on to see that they have "the time of their lives." It is hoped that their tables will be spread with a real Christmas feast.

Any questions as to specific needs will be answered promptly if addressed to Ada Wallace Unruh, 506 Stock Exchange Bldg., Portland.

Mr. Rawlings has invited the children to see a Jackie Coogan show at the Globe theater Christmas morning.

War is Hell
(American Legion Weekly)

Europe, weltering in debt and misery, throbbing with national jealousies and hatreds, placed flowers on the tombs of its unknown soldiers on armistice day. But of all the ceremonies on this November eleventh none was more compelling than the parade of the division of the living dead through the streets of Paris.

Not a drum beat. Not a trumpet sounded. Instead, the tramp of tired feet, the clumping of crutches, the creaking of wheel chairs, the silence of stunned crowds of spectators. There passed in broken ranks a regiment of the war-blinded, each groping man led by a child, another regiment of the armless and the legless, and a third regiment of those whose faces were so horribly marred by wounds that many wore masks.

There were twenty thousand of them. After the first moments of stifling silence, a tidal wave of emotion swept over the crowds and the well-clad, well-fed and sound-bodied leapt loudly and unashamed.

Sinners in Heaven

ling into the starlit dusk without.

For several minutes nothing more was heard. The girl was beginning to think it had been a false alarm, when all at once a slight rubbing noise reached them, as of something wriggling over rough ground. At the same instant a dark form was dimly discernible fitting, shadow-like, from a distant tree to the shelter of a large rock, there falling to the earth. Presently, from behind this rock, issued a little, snaky, black stream—three or four bodies waddling along on their fronts, their outline faintly distinguishable.

Minutely sweeping the whole visible horizon with his keen eyes, Croft now perceived other black streams, issuing from other temporary shelters, slowly trickling down the slope. . . . He leaned back.

"They are crawling along upon their stomachs, as I predicted, to avoid detection," he whispered.

Presently, two or three figures detached themselves from the moving mass and wriggled forward with incredible swiftness, leaving the remainder some yards behind.

"Scouts!" whispered Croft.

Barbara caught her breath sharply, drawing back into the hut.

Croft, his eyes fixed upon the advancing figures, laid his hand upon the transmitter, with forefinger outstretched toward the little key upon which so much depended. No sign of the wire encircling the hut was visible in the comparative gloom.

A few tense moments. . . . then he pressed the key, keeping it down, giving the spark gap a slight adjustment.

Then, from all around, rose a deafening medley of howls and frenzied yells, partly of pain but more often of fear, as the advancing men came in contact with the wire, seeing the wicked blue sparks hiss at their bare flesh, feeling the sharp sting of the electricity. Those who escaped it were equally terrified, and the whole order broke up. Some rolled upon the ground rubbing themselves, still howling; others fled, screaming, toward the south. A few, bravest, tried again to reach the goal; and again retreated, half petrified with fear of the unnatural.

Croft waited until but a few stragglers remained near the hut.

"Now," he cried, "we must show ourselves, and complete the illusion!"

"Oh!" remonstrated Barbara, "is that necessary?"

"Yes; if it's to be a success."

Seizing her arm, he dragged upon the door, and whirled her round to the landward end.

Those natives who remained uttered loud, fearful shouts, at sight of the two white figures; falling upon their faces, they stretched out arms of supplication, gabbling what seemed to Barbara unintelligible nonsense. Those feeling turned, halted, then likewise fell upon their faces, terrified at these apparitions in the starlight.

For a moment the girl thought her companion had lost his senses. Loosening her arm, he sprang forward with a bound, his arms wildly waving. Appearing unnaturally tall, his white shirt and bandaged head increasing the supernatural effect in eyes used only to a dark naked skin, he went through a pantomime of weird gestures. Now and then this was interspersed with extraordinary utterances snarled from between gleaming teeth and cruel, drawn-back lips. The wild awful fury, seeming to emanate from every pore, terrified her; he looked every inch a savage himself. His weird babble bore strong resemblance to that of her pursuer. Apparently the prostrate natives understood at least part of the discourse; for occasionally eager hands were raised in supplication, accompanied by cries or moaning replies.

Suddenly, as if at some command, the groveling wretches scrambled to their feet. With another torrent of wild words, he wheeled round, and to her amazement, threw his arms around her, pressing her close.

What seemed, in the excitement of the moment, like a cloud of smoke, together with a sharp explosion, momentarily dazed her senses.

She felt herself lifted bodily, whirled back again round the hut and in at the entrance; while, from without arose a fresh confusion of howling cries, with the tread of running feet, as the warriors, terrified by the magnificent effects of the revolver shot in the dusk, dashed for their lives away up the slope.

Once inside, he leaned back against the bamboo, still holding her close, his breath coming first, every nerve tingling, primitive man among primitive men, after the savage state into which he had worked himself.

"Well done!" he panted, laughing wildly. "The revolver—just then—was an inspiration! Vanishing in a puff of smoke finished the trick!"

Barbara gasped, too much astonished to realize that she was still clasped in his arms, having forgotten the existence of the revolver during the last scene. It hung from her hand, still smoking a little from its accidental discharge.

Oregon Holly Best

Holly is grown in Oregon from stock imported from England. It is superior to the native holly for decorative purposes and superior to the same strain grown in England, owing to difference in climate. Oregon-grown holly is being shipped to all parts of the United States for Christmas decorations. Here is a suggestion for a side line for Oregon farmers.

Philadelphia had need of some Oregon Holly this year. The city ran out of bayberry branches, which were being bought for decoration, and street vendors then sold a lot of poison ivy, which acts just like our poison oak. And then the doctors were kept busy for a while.

A world conference to restrict the sale of opium adjourned saturday at Geneva Saturday when Great Britain and France refused to sign the agreement. Mr. Sze, the Chinese representative, remarked that "for ways that are dark and for tricks that are vain the first conference is peculiar."

The final 300,000 boxes of the Hood River grower's apples have been sold to a New York firm for $500,000, f. o. b. Hood River.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT of the State of Oregon for the County of Linn, Dept. 2

Bertha O. Cunningham, Plaintiff, vs.
Enoch J. Cunningham, Defendant.

To Enoch J. Cunningham, the above named defendant:

In the name of the State of Oregon, you are hereby required to appear and answer the complaint of the above named plaintiff in the above entitled court in the above entitled cause, now on file with the clerk of said court, on or before the 24th day of December, 1924, and you are notified that if you fail to appear and answer said complaint as hereby required, plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded in her said complaint, to wit: For a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony existing between plaintiff and defendant; that plaintiff be awarded the custody of Franklin Cunningham and of Jane Cunningham, the minor children of plaintiff and defendant; for an order directing defendant to pay into said court for plaintiff $100 as attorney's fees, suit money and other expenses; and the sum of $30 a month during the pendency of this suit for maintenance of plaintiff and said children; and the sum of $30 a month as permanent alimony during the minority of said children; and for her costs and disbursements of this suit; and such other order as shall be proper in the premises.

This summons is served on you by publication in The Halsey Enterprise by order of the Hon. B. M. Payne, County Judge of Linn County, Oregon, made November 10, 1924. That date of the first publication of this summons is November 12, 1924, and the date of the last publication is December 24, 1924.
