Ministerial Indorsement
"What is the use of a county fair?" asks the person who has never before attended one and must see a reason for all things from a standpoint of usefulness—that of being a contribution to better living and ideals. He who is caught in the thrill perhaps takes no time to reason about its usefulness for he is in it whether or no.
"Thrill," I said, There is a thrill at the fair, the thrill of competition. Everybody is trying to outdo everybody else. Months have been spent, and perhaps in some instances years, to bring about a condition in the horse, cow hog or sheep that he may appear at the fair superior to any other. They think of the thrill when the judges say, "This one shall have the blue ribbon." Of course only one of each class shall receive such a thrill but the others have been in it up to that time.
There is a thrill for the ordinary observer who is not a competitor in the display of animals, vegetables, fruits, etc. He sees that grand champion, that prize winner, the red ribbon prize, and that which was too unlucky to receive any at all, and all the time he sees, although it is invisible to any other, that cow, horse, sheep, hog chicken pumpkin, tomato, flower or what not that is on his own farm. He will say to his wife, if she is there: "We could have taken a prize with that sheep or that pumpkin if we had brought it." He, at the same time, will have visions of improvement. His ideals of production in what ever line he is in will be raised.
Then, there is a like thrill for the boys and girls. The big end of the fair in real usefulness is that part which has to do with the youth. That pig, calf, sheep or chicken that some boy or girl raised and brought to the fair will be an unquenchable incentive to numerous youth of like age to do the same. They will be the real substantial men and women of affairs in time to come.
The boy or girl who has from time to time made display drawings and writings in his or her own school has a new standard set in looking at the school display. Many have the joy of receiving recognition from the judges in that line, but almost everyone will have a standard set in perseverance, neatness and skill, that he will not be satisfied to fall below.
Then, there is the friendly competition between communities. That little country place way out in the jungles, puts on a display of its products and life that gives one a notion that he would like to live there, and if one's own team or community has nothing there, he is saying to himself, "What is the matter with us anyway? We must be dead."
This year's Linn county fair has one very commendable feature on the negative side and that is the absence of gambling devices and shows of questionable character; if there were such we failed to see any signs of them.

With this commendable striving for the best in material production and life, all who are enlisted in the kingdom of our Savior can learn how important it is that we strive to produce the best for him. Not in the sense that one individual or religious body is competing with another, but that all are members of his body, and our striving shall be to make the whole body more glorious.
Robert I. Parker.

PLANT VARIETIES CREATED
Luther Burbank Perfects New Sweet Corn, Aster and Rose.
Santa Rosa, Cal.—Three new plant creations, a new type of sweet corn and new varieties of the aster and rose, have been created by Luther Burbank, plant scientist.
The corn specimen perfected by Burbank is much more productive than any he has produced, he stated. It is much sweeter, more tender and palatable and comes much earlier in the season.
Burbank has produced more than 100 varieties of the aster, and his latest offering is the largest of them all. It is also beautiful in color, texture and appearance.
Details of the new type of rose are unavailable, other than it is one more variety, a bit different than any previously produced.
