This is a good time to order the year's reading. Any Enterprise subscriber not in arrears can choose five monthlies from the list of nineteen on page 6 and get them a year for 75 cents. That's 15 cents a year apiece.

Charles Mishler writes that he has sold his dairy farm, near Chino, Cal., and moved into town.

The way the mails are handled in New York harbor would have seemed a miracle to King Solomon if he could have witnessed it without knowledge of the processes preceding the feat. Read about it on page 6.

Mr. Rippey, evangelist working at Tangent, says there is not a burning hell and the Bible does not teach that there is but the Bible says there will be one when "the earth and the works thereof shall be burned up." That will be hell fire.

One of the live columns of the Enterprise this week is the fourth on page 6. There are five news stories, each as interesting as many a romance that fills a page and all true, not fables. First three poker players are found dead from gas in the middle of their game. Animals figure in the other four. A dog's wild barking calls a father in time for him to save his baby by shooting an eagle that is carrying it off. A little terrier rewards the kindly gesture of a stranger by saving his life when a bulldog has him down. A swindler gets two years for selling a bear he does not possess, and a deer meets a railroad hand car and sends its owner to a hospital. It will pay to read every page.

The Portland Oregonian celebrates the 75th anniversary of its birth next Friday. The editor of the Enterprise beat that by 24 days.

The morning Mr. Wahl was to have an eye removed at Eugene he found himself able to see dimly with the organ, which was supposed to be hopelessly gone so he came home with two eyes and a slight improvement continues.

Next Sunday is "golden rule day," when the needs of the little refugees from Turkish brutality will be stressed and funds asked for the American relief work in the near east.

Obituary

Virgil L. Davis was born in the vicinity of Harrisburg, May 21, 1858, where he lived until five years ago. He and his family lived one year at Corvallis, but the last four years they have made their home on their farm near Halsey, where he departed from this life Nov. 26th, 1925.

Dr. H. A. Davis, of whom Virgil was the youngest son, was a well-known physician in Harrisburg.

When a young man Mr. Davis attended and graduated from the United Brethren college at Philomath. He taught one term at the Harris school, but he followed the occupation of farming the remaining part of his active life.

Twenty-three years ago next June, Mr. Davis had a severe sickness that left him an invalid. All that medical aid could do did not bring relief, but he bore his affliction during the many years with great patience.

He was married Dec. 30, 1896, to Hattie Quigley of Scio, who is left to mourn his death. There are three children from this marriage, Mrs. Mona Mason of Corvallis, Henry A. Davis of Halsey, and Mrs. Omega Q. Baker of San Diego, Cal., and there is one son by a former marriage, Albert W. Davis of Coquille, Or.

Mr. Davis was a member of two orders, the Odd Fellows and the Woodmen of the World.

The funeral was held Saturday afternoon at the Methodist church in Harrisburg. The service was conducted by Robert Parker, assisted by Theodore Mitzner. The sermon text was from II Cor. 4: 18.

The choir at Harrisburg rendered several selections of music and the Odd Fellow lodge had charge at the grave.

Cards of Thanks

We wish to thank our neighbors, friends and the Odd Fellows' lodge for the many favors and for the assistance rendered during the sickness and death of our husband and father, and for the many beautiful floral pieces, and also for the choir at Harrisburg for the selections of music.

Mrs. Virgil Davis and Family.

Fat, Fair and Forty

The Albany Democrat-Herald of Nov. 24 was fat — the fattest paper, probably, ever issued in the county — 80 pages. The paper is very fair in politics, instead of being, as each of the two Albany papers were before they were combined, "for the party, right or wrong." Time will disclose whether this fairness can stand up through an election campaign. And the paper was celebrating the fortieth anniversary of its birth.

The edition was dedicated "to Linn county's heroic pioneers." Sections were devoted to newspaper history, Linn county history, Albany, literary and sporting matters, natural resources, agriculture and stock raising, Linn county towns, the scenic beauties of the county and state and other subjects. There were many cuts of scenes, buildings and people.
